DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Grain and soybean bids advanced again today due to crop concerns and forecasts for hot, dry weather in the Midwest. Wheat steady to 8 cents higher. Corn steady to 3 cents higher. Sorghum 6 cents higher. Soybeans 1 to 8 cents higher. Recent widespread rains across the Corn Belt and right now crops looking super for the most part. However, scorching temperatures into the upper 90's forecast for the next several d?h blustery winds crop conditions could deteriorate very rapidly. This should get Winter wheat harvest back in high gear but could slow up double cropping of soybean? little spurt of export orders the past couple of weeks certainly a factor in the improved prices. Prospects for foreign sales down the road, not looking too bright, especially along the Pacific Rim. ?ial envoy to China could include talks of a Favorable Nation Status. Also, the US and other countries are anxious to help this part of the country in their financial crisis. Recent price upturns still left most commodity quotes below a year ago, corn getting close but soybeans dragging behind.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

JUNE 29-JULY 5, 1998

CANADA DAY, JUNE 1.

DOG DAYS OF SUMMER

July's Dog Days commence on July 3, just 24 hours before the Independence Day fireworks begin. Despite Dog Days representing the hot, sultry days of summer, they occur on the same date that Earth reaches its farthest distance from the Sun, or aphelion, when the distance stretches to 94,512,258 miles By comparison, January 4, 1998, found Earth a mere 91,400,005 miles away from the Sun. According to the Romans, however, the Dog Star, Sirius — the summer sky's brightest star — added its heat to the summer from July 3 to August 11, making for that sultry weather

As the Dog Days commence, so they end.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ To ease a mild sunburn, wash the skin with apple cider vinegar.

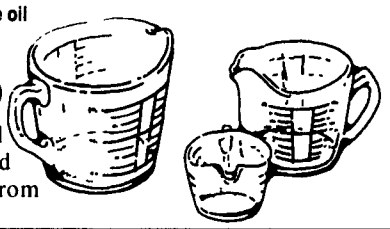
CORN & BLACK-BEAN PITAS

4 ears fresh corn (or 1 can kernels)
3 cups (or 2 cans) cooked black beans
1 cup chopped red onion
1 cup diced celery
3 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
1 tablespoon olive oil
2 ounces feta, crumbled
2 pitas (6-inch ea.)

Boil corn until done, cool, and cut kernels from cobs. Combine corn with remaining filling ingredients and toss well. Cut pitas in half and open the pockets. Spoon the filling into the four pita halves.

Makes 4 servings.



The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Rain on first Dog Day means rain for 40 days after.

Whatever July and August do not boil, September cannot fry.

If it rains on St. Mary's Day (July 2), it will rain for four weeks.

OPINION

Farms For The Future

Recent opinion polls and news reports all suggest the public is becoming increasingly concerned over runaway growth and its ramifications in the metropolitan Washington and Baltimore areas and the surrounding mid-Atlantic region. As our population soars and shifts to rural areas with cheaper land and greater open space, growing numbers of residents are openly voicing their frustration and distress over the impact of sprawling development on their lives.

Frequently overshadowed in the clamor about sprawl-induced construction, congestion, crime and overcrowded classrooms is the destruction of our farmland and the agrarian way of life it has provided generations of Maryland farmers and the escalating conflicts between farmers and city dwellers who want country surroundings but eschew the agricultural traditions.

In the last 45 years, about 2 million acres of Maryland farmland, more than half the total agricultural land base in 1950, were paved over as the state's population swelled by 2.5 million. That means just about one acre of farmland production was lost for every person added to the state's census rolls. The Maryland Department of Agriculture says that should the ratio persist, the state in just two generations will not have a single acre of farmland left to feed its projected population of 9 million. If that trend is not sufficiently sobering, then consider the fate of the Maryland farmer. In 1950, the state had 39,000 farmers. Today, the number is 13,000 and falling.

As a fourth-generation Maryland farmer with a true passion for the land and a strong commitment to seeing it saved from rampant, runaway growth, I am concerned about the loss of the state's farmers and farmland. This is state with a proud agricultural heritage. During the Revolutionary War, our farmland generated flour, meat and other foodstuffs for George Washington's army and his French allies, an action for which we later were hailed as the Breadbasket of the Revolution. Soil additives were developed in Maryland, and the nation's first manufactured fertilizer was produced in Baltimore. Even today agriculture remains Maryland's largest industry with $1.5 billion in annual sales, and the farmland upon which this economic powerhouse is based continues to offer numerous other environmental, social, scenic, historical, cultural, and wildlife benefits.

To its credit, the state has recognized the widespread but often underappreciated values of our farmland and the development threat facing it. Long before most, Maryland established a number of farmland protection programs, and it now leads the country in farmland acreage permanently saved from development.

But admirable as they are, the programs still have not been enough. Much of our most important farmland remains at serious risk of being overrun. Moreover, less than seven percent of the state's farmland with prime or productive soils and an even smaller percent of ag land with key environmental, cultural or historical features have been permanently protected.

Three years ago, the Future Harvest Project brought together a diverse group of public and private agricultural, environmental, political, planning and development interests as the Chesapeake Farms for the Future Board. The board completed an appraisal of the state's farmland protection efforts. As part of the process, it identified on sophisticated, computer-generated maps the state's strategic farmland, the land most deserving protection because of its agricultural, environmental, cultural, or historical importance or its risk of being developed. It also developed a model farmland protection program.

The model is the first of its kind in the country. It relies on a comprehensive mix of proven incentive-based and regulatory farmland protection techniques that evenly divide program cost between individual landowners and the general public.

With the program, responsible county and state agencies would establish plans with firm farmland protection goals and timetables-goals and timetables that identify on the maps which strategic farmland to save and how. Agricultural zoning protection would be strengthened. More compact, efficient housing would be encouraged in farming areas. Landowners would receive stronger incentives for enrolling their land in agricultural protection districts. Federal and state funding for farmland protection programs would be increased to truly allow landowners the option of saving their land rather than developing it. Counties would

To Understand Odor Perception

A 1995 report from North Carolina State University Swine Odor Task force noted four factors which influence how objectionable an odor may be to individuals

First, the amount of control an individual has over the situation will affect ones feelings towards an odor If one feels they have no ability to do anything about the odor, then the situation is likely to be more offensive.

Second, the more understanding one has about the source of an odor, the more tolerable an odor will be If the source of an odor seems mysterious to the offended party, the level of objection is likely to be higher

Third, the context of an odor also influences how objectionable the odor will be. If the operation has dirty, unkempt appearance, the neighbors are likely to have more of a problem with the odor then if the farm is neat, tidy and appealing

Fourth, is the level of exposure If one is constantly exposed to an odor, ones awareness of it lessens In time one may lose the ability to detect the odor. This explains why livestock workers may have a difficult time understanding the objections of others about odor By considering these factors one may gain an understanding of where objections to odors are likely to occur and steps which could be taken to avoid or reduce the problems.

To Control Bagworms

Dr. Timothy Elkner, Lancaster County Extension Horticultural Agent, notes bagworms have hatched recently. If you had problems with these pests last year, now is the time to check your plants to see if these insects are around again this year

Look for tiny bags on the upper leaf surface of your deciduous plants or along the needles of spruce and arborvitae The bags are pointing upward at this time of year and are mostly silk with little bits of leaves attached. As the insects grow larger, the bags will hang downward and will be covered with a large amount of plant material

Start your scouting now where bags were observed over the winter season It is important to find bagworms early in their development because controlling them is easier while they are small Bt will provide excellent control while bagworms are small. There are several other products labeled for the control of bagworms on ornamental plants.

To Enter Hay Show

The Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council and Penn State Cooperative Extension are sponsoring the 1998 Pennsylvania Hay Show as part of the Penn State Ag Progress Days. Ag Progress Days is scheduled August 18 -20 at the Rock Spring Research Farm. The hay show has three sections· Field Cured, Heat Treated and Preservative Treated There are 30 classes of hay in each section for exhibitors to enter hay samples.

Samples for this year's show must delivered to Ag Progress Days before 10 a.m on August 18 A complete copy of the classes and rules may be obtained from your county extension office

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W ALTHOUSE

NOW I KNOW!
June 28, 1998

Background Scripture:
Job 38: 1-7; 42:1-6-10
Devotional Reading:
Job 28:20-28

The "friends" of Job have all had their say: three times, in fact. Job has answered each of their discourses, insisting upon his innocence and the rightness of his cause.

A fourth visitor, Elihu, suddenly appears, vents his anger upon Job and just as suddenly disappears from the scene.

Job has repeatedly asked God to come and hear his complaint. Now at last, enter God, demanding: "Who is this that darkens counsel by words without knowledge?" The Lord of the universe governs in light, but Job's ignorant complaints bring, not light, but darkness. Job wants to argue with God and challenge him to answer his questions; all right, let him stand up like a man and see whether he can answer God's questions!

These questions, 77 as I counted them, span most of chapter 38 through 41. From the first — "Where were you when I laid the foundation of the earth?" (38:4) — to the last — "Who can open the doors of (Leviathan, a mythical sea monster) his face?" (41:14) — they are unanswerable. (All of us should read these questions at least annually to help us remember who we are and are not!)

BEYOND UNDERSTANDING

The questions are asked, not in expectation that Job might answer them, but to forcefully impress upon him that the creature cannot possibly understand the answers that the Creator might give to his questions. Job is asking good and honest questions about the infinite, but he and all of us are able to comprehend only that which is finite.

Like Job we ask our questions and the more up-front of us even sometimes challenge God with our human logic. "Lord, how could you let this happen?" "Why this innocent little child?" "What have I done to deserve this?" "How can you let evil people prosper?" "Lord, how can you be good and permit this evil?" And you can probably add some questions of your own. These human questions are logical and we are not blasphemous in asking them. But we are arrogant in thinking that we could understand God's answers.

I'm not suggesting for one moment that we should not seek answers to life's questions. The gospel of Jesus Christ gives us all the answers that we can comprehend. Sometimes we may not be satisfied with those answers, just as Job was not satisfied with the traditional theologial answers given by his friends. But, having asked our questions and understood as much of the answers as we can, we need to know that the ultimate answers lie beyond human comprehension. That is where faith comes in, living confidently on the basis of what we do know and can understand.

SOMETHING TO BANK ON

This is what Job concluded. Faced with God's unanswerable questions, he confesses the basis upon which he will live: "I know that thou canst do all things, and that no purpose of thine can be thwarted" (42:2). No matter how tragic and bleak the circumstances of life, Job will trust in the God whose eternal purposes are not whimisical and cannot be defeated. That will be enough for he knows now that "I have uttered what I did not understand . . ."

The late Prof. Samuel Terien comments that apparently Job's faith had been an inherited, second-hand one. In good times, that inherited faith was good enough, but in the midst of his personal tragedy it was not. Now, having experienced God in the deepest levels of his life, he has a faith that will sustain him: "I had heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now my eyes see thee . . ." (42:5).

Job does not have to have answers to all his questions to the Creator, for he knows and trusts the Creator himself. Job could say, Now I know! Can you?

Pennsylvania Farm Show Receives National Special Events Honor

Also reviewing for the award was the editorial staff of the magazine.

He explained that out of the 38,000 special events listed with the Alliance, the awards program recognizes 15 different catagories, of which the "rodeo/livestock show" was one.

He said that it is a large catagory among those considered for awards, with about 1,800 shows falling within the same catagory as the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

Davis said that Grumbine will receive an official award plaque in about three weeks, but that he hopes the Farm Show event will be able to benefit from the recognition the award provides.

"It helps with future sponsors, exhibitors, government agencies," he said. "In this catagory, many times the events are run by the state ag department or some other governmental agency, and something like (Pennsylvania Farm Show receiving the award) shows (the sponsors and exhibitors and government officials) that (the Farm Show organizers) are right on target."

Davis said that the awards program is intended to help outstanding shows benefit from increasing their recognition and reputation.

"(Commercial exhibitors) want to be associated with good events ... the award gives some credibility," he said.

Grumbine has been directly involved with the Farm Show for more than 17 years, having served for 15 years as a member of the Farm Show Commission, prior to being selected to be director.

While perhaps not widely known, the Farm Show Commission is an independent authority from state government, although the secretary of the Pa. Department of Agriculture is automatically chairman of the commission.

The state, through annual legislation, has been providing some support funds, primarily aimed at helping defray the costs of operating the livestock and agricultural shows, but for the most part the state Farm Show has been operating on its own income.

Except for the summer months (the facility is not air conditioned), the complex has a full schedule.

It is estimated that events held at the Farm Show Complex generates $171 million each year, 90 percent of which is taxable, representing about $10 million in taxes for state and local governments.

The state support for the Farm Show Commission has declined from more than $1 million to its present $800,000, over the past 15 years.

At the same time, efforts were made to increase the use of the facility to generate operational funds.

In the meantime, there has been more than $5 million in capital expenditures from the Legislature and state executive government over the past six years for such things as a new roof, new and greatly improved lighting in the Large Arena, a two-story addition, and reflooring of the Main Exhibition Hall (a non-skid and cushioned surface has been put down on the floor to provide better safety and health for animals and people.)

Several years ago, a traffic light had been installed at the intersection of the Farm Show Complex parking lot main entrance and Cameron Street to create a better traffic flow situation.

Since taking over as director, Grumbine has implemented several additional improvements, such as murals, better signage, fresh paint, changes and expansion in parking and landscaping, and last year the brass marquees of the complex were refurbished by the same company that refurbished the Statue of Liberty.

The funds to pay for the work came out of operational funds, which of course, are limited. The Farm Show Complex operates with a $5 million annual budget.

The Farm Show Complex operates 365 days a year with its own security, serves as a host facility for 211 days each year, and employs 350 full-time workers, and 900 temporary workers.

It also is the home playing arena for the professional indoor soccer team, the Harrisburg Heat.

An analysis report issued last year on the financial and competitive effectiveness of the Farm Show Complex suggested that perhaps it could be privatized.

That analysis was made at the request of the state House of Representatives, and was done only to investigate the possibilities of having private business take over the Farm Show.

However, in reviewing the report, it was apparent that it was comparing the Farm Show Complex (16 acres under one roof) to convention centers and more recently constructed events venues designed for such events.

While that report acknowledged that the existing Farm Show facility makes money on some shows, it suggests that it could make more.

What didn't weigh as heavily in the analysis, as perhaps it should have, is the fact that the facilities were built (began construction in 1929, when the Stock Market crashed) to be used for the once-per-year Pennsylvania Farm Show, and that all the other shows held throughout the year — auto, homebuilders, dog, computer, etc., — help to pay for maintaining the facility for the Farm Show.

In fact, the report missed the fact that despite the Farm Show Commission receiving at least $200,000 less today in state support than it did 15 years ago, the Farm Show Commission has been able to eliminate rental fees that used to be charged to the groups holding livestock shows.

The fees for commercial exhibitors are a little more than $300 for the week of the Farm Show, which is one of the lowest rates charges at any special event for commercial space. In fact, some of the other special events held at the facility charge more than $900 for the same size commercial spot with many fewer patrons attending.

In effect, what the award recognizes and the evidence shows is that the Pennsylvania Farm Show has been one of the most inexpensive and effective promotional and educational tools available to the agricultural industry.

More farmers attend the Farm Show as exhibitors than attend farmer-only events in the region.

Davis said the award has been given out by the special events organization and magazine since 1980.

He said that when he took over as publisher in 1991, the events database held by the organization listed 12,000 special events. That has grown to its current listing of 38,000 special events. "It's definitely a growth industry," Davis said.

In fact, since there are no established college curriculums that prepare people specifically to organize and operate special events, the alliance now provides some limited courses at New York University and Northwestern University.

"Every time we turn around, a new event is popping up," Davis said.

He said that, on average, 11.3 million people per week attend special events.

"More people attend just fairs than attend the games of all of the major league sports combined, for their entire seasons."

The difference is that television and advertising revenues make sports seem to attract more people. The truth, Davis said, is that many more people pay out of pocket to attend special events.

He said he knows that those who purchase commercial exhibitor space at special events such as the Farm Show make good money, or else they wouldn't be there, and the special events industry wouldn't be growing so strongly.

"People can reach people face-to-face (at special events) where they couldn't in the past. People like Levi Strauss got started work-

Make the R/W Connection
936 Links Ave, Landisville Pa 717-898-5257

I went to R/W today and picked up milk loading hose. At R/W they had more tubing and hose than you can shake a stick at. They even had the sanitary fittings I needed to move my milk lines.

When I moved the feed bin I needed metal hose. R/W had it in stock. Now the feed truck unloads faster and easier.

I've been milking for 25 years and when I called R/W with the size of my braided milk tubing, they identified it over the phone.

Finally changed our chicken water tubing. R/W gave me a great price on all my tubing and fitting needs.

R/W Connection is the source for tubing and fittings. Our knowledgeable staff backed by the leading manufacture of domestic tubing will get what you need. Call us and to make the R/W Connection.

Factors Affecting Farm Profits - Article 4

A number of factors can affect farm profits, some of which are
- Farming methods
- Size of business
- Management practices
- Income and expenses

This article will focus on farming methods. Other factors will be discussed in upcoming articles. There are many different ways to farm. How much capital you will need and what you will need it for, will be determined in part by the style of farming you choose.

The dairy industry is changing, and these changes may dictate a need for farmers to reexamine the way they do business. The traditional methods of the past may not be appropriate for the present or the future. So, explore the options, push the pencil, consider the pros and cons of the various options, and choose a style that fits you.

Rent vs. Buy. If capital is tight, it will probably be more economical to rent rather than taking on a lot of debt to purchase your own farm. Rental payments generally are less than real-estate taxes and mortgage payments. Rent also is a tax deductible expense, principal payments on land are not.

Custom Hire vs. Owning, Operating and Maintaining Your Own Equipment. Similarly, it will probably be cheaper to hire a custom operator to do some farm jobs rather than owning, housing, operating and maintaining your own machinery -- that is, if good operators are available when you need them. When you hire a custom operator, you are also hiring some part time help and some extra machinery, such as tractors, wagons, etc.

Leasing and Sharing vs. Purchasing and Maintaining Your Own Equipment. Another option is to lease some of your equipment when you need it, rather than to buy it and have it sit idle for long periods of time. You can also share machinery with the neighbors in order to reduce capital expenditures.

Buying Feeds vs. Growing Them. You also have the option of buying all your feed, of growing forages only and buying all your grain, or buying all your feed. The option you choose may depend on the amount of acreage you have, the amount of time you have for fieldwork, the amount of equipment you own or afford to own and maintain, or your costs of producing feed vs. the cost of buying it. Generally, you can buy grain almost as cheap as you can grow it, especially if you buy feed at harvest time when prices are generally more favorable. Having enough land to grow most of your feed is advantageous, but it may not always be available or affordable. Even if you have a lot of land, the time you spend in the barn with the cows may be more valuable than the time you spend in the fields. In that case you may want to hire crop labor, hire custom operators, or rent your land out and let someone else produce the feed.

Buying all Your Feed as a TMR Mix. You could own your farm and dairy herd, but have someone else crop the land, store the feed, purchase the necessary feed ingredients, mix up the feed ration, and deliver it as a TMR to your farm daily. Through your TMR provider, you may have access to a greater variety of feeds, and at bulk discount rates. This eliminates your need for feed storage facilities and field machinery plus it could provide you the opportunity to earn additional income from other employment and ventures.

Grazing vs. Cropping. If capital is short, you may want to consider grazing vs. cropping as a way to reduce capital requirements. Chances are, this may not make your life any simpler. You need to look at pasture as a crop, the goal of which is to get high yields of good quality feed at reasonable cost. This requires a lot of management skills. You always need to be monitoring pasture growth and grazing patterns in order to match pasture production with the herd's daily needs while also reducing pasture losses. You need to be continually asking yourself, where is the feed coming from tomorrow? next week? two months from now? when the pastures dry up? and next winter? What pasture species do I plant that will be high yielding throughout the year while being palatable to the herd? How do I maintain a thick productive stand? What size plot do I need today or how long should I leave cows in a given plot? What do I do with the small plots of excess growth that are a nuisance to bale? How can I manage pasture plots to reduce selective grazing and pasture wastage without depressing dry matter intakes and milk production? How do I get rid of manure? How do I get water to the pastures, and how do I maintain dry matter intakes in the heat of summer? How do I feed and manage the herd in a pasture system? How heavily do I rely on pastures for feed, and how much supplemental feeding do I do in the barn? How much production can I afford to give up, if any, relative to the costs I save?

Purchasing Replacements or Contracting Heifers vs. Raising Them. If you are short on acreage, on barn space or labor, you may want to purchase your replacements, or contract your heifers out for someone else to raise rather than raising them yourself. Maybe you don't like raising heifers and perhaps someone else could do a better job than you. This might cost you more than raising them yourself, but it also allows you to devote more of your land, labor and facilities to support a larger milking herd and perhaps earn more profit. Purchasing some replacements also is a way of improving or diversifying the genetics of your herd. You need to consider the cost of doing this plus you also need to be concerned about the quality of the job done by the heifer raiser, and about the risk of introducing new diseases to your farm.

Joint Ventures. Would it be beneficial to unite with other dairy farmers in a joint venture of some sort to form a larger, more efficient, jointly-owned dairy business that consists of a herd and facilities? You could still own your farm but rent it to the business while working for the business and drawing a salary and then splitting the herd profits and losses at the end of the year. Rather than spend the same dollars remodeling your present facilities and possibly still not have a desirable setup, or building a new, small sized facility that matches the size of your farm, would it be more economical to join forces with other similar farmers to build a larger, more efficient operation? This also has the potential of letting the participating farmers specialize so they could do the things they are good at and enjoy doing -- for the overall good of the whole team. The farmers would have to be able to work together as a team, and if sometime in the future you want out of the business, you could sell your share in the dairy business and still retain ownership of your farm.

F.O. 4 July Milk $14

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Acting Market Administrator David Z. Walker recently announced for July 1998 a Class I price of $14.11 per hundredweight and a Class II price of $11.18 per hundredweight.

The Class I price could be affected by judicial action.

The July Class I price includes the 20-cent assessment for fluid milk promotion and consumer education. The Class I price and the Class II price are down $1.13 from June but are 18 cents higher when compared to year earlier levels.

Mr. Walker announced a Class III milk price of $10.78 per hundredweight for May 1998 and a Class III-A price of $13.86 per hundredweight for the month. The Class III price was down $1.16 from the previous month, while Class III-A price increased $1.05.

The July 1998 Class I and Class II prices and the May 1998 Class III price are based on the May 1998 basic formula milk price of $10.88 per hundredweight at a 3.5 percent butterfat content. The May 1998 butterfat price was $1.7966 per pound, up 30.69 cents from April. The May skim milk price per hundredweight was $4.66.

The USDA reported that the wholesale price of Grade A butter at Chicago for May was $1.4945 per pound on the mercantile exchange and the Central States nonfat dry milk price was $1.0348 per pound.

Temple Greenhouses: Already Primed For Poinsettias

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

TEMPLE (Berks Co.) — For the moment, forget the cliche.

Again, one man's misfortune has turned into another's bountiful luck.

In 1956, a terrible hailstorm destroyed the small greenhouse operation in Temple owned by James MacLatchie. Within 10 minutes, the business was completely wiped out. However, in June of 1960, one year before the Berlin Wall was built, and fleeing the communists who were turning greenhouses in East Germany into collectives, the new owners of the site, Gunther Wolter and his family, came to America and eventually settled in Temple. There, they rebuilt on the site where the hailstorm wreaked havoc — and where the business now prospers with Gunther's son, Dieter, and Dieter's family.

Experience in the greenhouse business goes way back, to 1888, for the Wolter family. Dieter's great-grandfather, Emil Wolter, was an apprentice in the greenhouse industry in Mecklenburg, a German state. Journeymen such as Emil had to travel and work for other greenhouses — he went as far south as Greece and over to Turkey. Eventually he married and settled in Fehrbellin, Germany.

In 1919, Dieter's grandfather Emil Karl Wolter went to work with his father. He also apprenticed for a time. The business flourished. Then, in 1920, Dieter's father, Gunther, was born.

Years later Gunther passed his journeyman studies and worked in other greenhouses in Angermuende, Halberstadt, and Bremen. After serving in the army, he married Annelis Wolter (nee Mueller).

Annelis's family worked in the greenhouse business and she studied "Blumenbinder" — floral design.

In 1946, Dieter was born. In 1947, Dieter's father, Gunther, made his "Meister" examination and in 1948 took over the family greenhouse. Greenhouses were added. In 1955, a major renovation and modernization was started. The new greenhouses included major crops such as Cyclamen, carnation, freezia, and other blooming plants, shipped all over East Germany.

But it began to fall apart, because Gunther didn't believe in what the East German regime was doing. The government began to take over and form collectives. Gunther knew the greenhouse industry was next. If you weren't a communist, you were in trouble.

So, on June 5, 1960, Gunther and family fled East Germany. They stayed in West Berlin. In December, the family arrived in New York and moved to Staten Island. Gunther took a job as a cook's helper in Moravian College and Annelis worked as a "salad girl." Dieter went into the 9th grade in Curtis High School. The years, Dieter recalled, were rough, because of the difficulty of learning the English language.

The family kept one goal in mind: return to the greenhouse business. Gunther came across the greenhouse for sale in Temple.

So, on March 3, 1963, he began the business and the family moved to Temple.

Eventually, in March 1977, Dieter and wife Sheila took over the Temple Greenhouse business and, in the years since, added land and remodeled the buildings.

Dieter and Sheila Wolter manage Temple Greenhouses with son Karl, 23, and daughter Erika, 26, In all, about 30,000 square feet are under greenhouse cover and house two seasons worth of flowers and greenery: the spring bedding and vegetable plant season, in addition to flowers, and the Christmas season, including a booming poinsettia business. Included is a gift shop with silk flowers.

The retail store also handles about 90 different herbs, about 100 different varieties of perennials, 26 different varieties of petunias (including the new Purple Wave), and 17 different varieties of tomatoes. There are also about 20 varieties of peppers and a wide array of vegetable and other plants. About 95 percent of the spring crops are retail, the rest wholesale.

In preparation for the holiday season, "almost everything is full of poinsettias," noted Dieter. In all, about 20,000 poinsettia plants are made ready for the season. They include about a dozen different varieties, including four reds (the most popular varieties), three whites, three pinks, and speckled and stripes. The plants range from one to nine per pot, and can grow from 3 inches to 12 inches in height. Some plants can spread to two feet. About 60 percent of the poinsettia crop is retail and the rest are sold to flower shops and other businesses.

Wolter spoke about the challenges of maintaining the 20,000 poinsettias for a small market while competing against the K-Marts, Hechingers, and Lowes.

A week after Easter, the planting stock arrives from California. The cuttings are placed in a four-inch pot and then transferred to a larger pot. Around mid-July, cuttings begin for the Christmas market. The cuttings are placed in "oasis" cubes and are grown, about 15-20 cuttings per pot, depending on variety and pot size.

A strict regimen is followed to ensure the health and vitality of the cuttings. The house is heated properly to ensure good root growth. Work on the cuttings, done by hand, begins at 4:30 in the morning until noon every day. Four batches are performed: one begins in mid-July, another the first week in August, another the third week in August, and the last the first week of September.

Depending on which cultivar is used, special heating and other requirements are necessary. In July, even during the regular summer heat, night temperatures must be kept constant. In the daytime, cooling must occur with fans and ventilators to ensure proper root temperature.

Other challenges surface during the growing season. One is the control of the white fly. Wolter uses chemicals to keep the pests under control.

"I walk through the greenhouses every day and check for insects," he said. Wolter does so, he said, more as a "preventative-type" measure to ensure the cleanliness and health of the plants.

Every plant, Wolter noted, has special disease risks. Most ar root-related. It is important to ensure cleanliness and health of the root system.

Also, lots of sunshine ensure the plant grows steadily and slowly. In seasons without sunshine, the plant stems out, growing too fast. If there is reduced sunlight, Wolter uses growth retardants.

The most profitable plants are the spring bedding plants.

But to ensure a full season, the greenhouses are filled with poinsettias for the holidays.

This spring has been a challenge for the greenhouse industry, Wolter indicated. He cites the "goofiest spring" he's seen. The weather, with 12 straight days of rain, created problems because customers weren't buying. As a result, normally what would include 30 sales days were cut in half.

Like the agriculture industry, Wolter said, the greenhouse industry is "still dependent on the weather. If the weather is flooey, so is everything else."

Competing in a marketplace that includes large markets such as Hechinger's and Lowes presents its own challenges, too. Wolter caters to people who can't find the rare flowers and for those looking for "better quality, better service to customers," he said. They can stay competitive with the bigger chain stores in price.

"We find that people like variety, like to have the choice," he said. "We prefer to stay smaller," said Wolter, and remain in complete control of different aspects of the business.

Karl Wolter holds up a hanging basket of the popular Purple Wave petunias at Temple Greenhouses. Experience in the greenhouse business goes way back, to 1888, for the Wolter family.

Depending on the season, anywhere from six to 12 full- and part-time employees are involved in the business.

Until 1984, the store had its own fresh flower and delivery service. But since then they have decided to concentrate more on the greenhouse and gift shop.

In years past, Temple Greenhouses has met the challenges of the weather. In 1996, one greenhouse roof caved in, bringing down about 8 feet of snow. The new gutter-connected 81 by 135 foot Campbell-Obrian greenhouse can manage a snow load of that magnitude.

Also, to match nearby greenhouses, the new greenhouse will accommodate an automatic watering system. In the adjacent greenhouse, automatic watering systems place water in the poinsettia plots. There are four tubes running to all the 8-inch pots

At a tour of the greenhouses, Wolter pointed to the 8-inch pots with the automatic drip waterers. "These will all be 6-inch single-pinch, with 5-7 flowers each when finished," he said.

About 80 percent of the growing areas will soon be all poinsettias, he said.

There are four tubes running to all the 8-inch pots.

Bryan Retires Fom 4-H

SPRINGFIELD (Delaware Co.) — 4-H coordinator for Delaware County, C.R. "Bud" Bryan Jr., will retire on June 30 after 42 years of service with Penn State Cooperative Extension.

The 4-H board, members, and staff are planning a picnic in his honor on Tuesday, July 21, at 6 p.m. at Redwood Community Playhouse, Upland.

Friends, former 4-H members and volunteers, neighbors and co-workers are invited to join the fun by calling the office at (610) 690-2655 for details.

Bryan began his career with Penn State Cooperative Extension soon after graduating from the College of Agriculture, Penn State. When he first came to Delaware County, there were still traditional farms and farm families participating in 4-H. As the county became more densely populated and most farms disappeared, he initiated opportunities for non-farm families to benefit from 4-H programs.

Last year, 7,498 Delaware County children were members of 4-H. Many of these children participate through their schools, either in the classroom or as a school club. Bryan was at the forefront in identifying ways for school children to "learn by doing" (4-H slogan). Embryology gives children the opportunity to incubate eggs and watch chicks hatch. They learn science facts while they practice responsible care of the eggs and chicks. Indoor gardening provides lessons and all the necessary materials for teachers to guide children in growing plants from seeds, bulbs and cuttings. Food Production Education provides leaders with lessons and workbooks about the agricultural sources of the foods we eat. After studying the material, classes are invited to the 4-H Farm to see the sheep, pigs, cattle and chickens being raised by 4-H members.

Almost all of the current Agriculture club members who raise farm animals participate as part of cooperatives at the 4-H Farm and Center at the Garrett Willliamson Foundation in Newtown Square. This enables suburban children to learn animal science, develop responsibility, practice teamwork and, for experienced members, to guide the learning experience of new members.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — What should you expect from MUN (milk urea nitrogen) values as you pasture your cows?

Should rations be changed as we enter the pasture season?

These are two important questions that need to be addressed to implement pasture usage in our dairy cows' diets.

As always, every farm has unique management applications in feeding dairy cows. What is important, is to recognize the driving forces in milk production and how best to implement these on each farm.

Optimum milk output is always driven by optimum rumen function and output. Feeding rumen bugs should always be our number one consideration whether we cafeteria-style feed our cows, provide a TMR, pasture, or any combination of these.

At our farm, we feed a 100 percent pure TMR from Dec. 1 through April 1. What happens after April 1 could and would affect our cows if we didn't address what changes take place.

First of all, our main intention is to provide outside, off-concrete exercise April through November.

This is best accomplished by our 40 acres of bluegrass pasture for our 160 cows. This provides a clean environment, ample water, fresh air, and nutritious feed, and a comfortable place to rest four hours a day.

These also happen to be the same goals in our free-stall barn, for the other 20 hours.

We address the differences in nutrition between TMR and grass, on our operation.

When we balance our TMR we are mainly concerned with maintaining a critical relationship between rumen degradable protein and rumen degradable carbohydrates.

The correct blend for us has been established using pounds of milk, percent crude protein, percent butterfat, MUN and percent true protein.

Averaging over 80 pounds of milk on twice-per-day milking and maintaining healthy fertile cows presents quite a challenge to not upset the rumen function.

Using two measurable components in our diet, such as percent soluble protein and percent starch, we can maintain a similar rumen environment, as we experience changes in our farm feed supplies, or in the need to change feed sources for the rations.

More specifically, we compare our TMR nutritionally with what replaces it in the four- to five-hour pasture period.

To do this, dry matter, (DM) intakes before and after the pasture season starts must be known.

Before pasture:
DMI=49.5 pounds DM TMR

After start of pasture:
DMI=47.5 pounds DM TMR
?DM Pasture

We assume at this point, that the grass DMI is two pounds DM at minimum. From knowing that the better the forage quality, the greater the intake, we actually allow for a 3-pound DMI of pasture.

Let's now compare the two diets:

TMR
%CP 16.5%
%SP 31.5%
%Starch 30.4%

At 49.5 pounds intake, 1,169 grams of soluble protein is provided and 15.05 pounds of starch, the ratio of grams soluble protein to pounds starch is 77.6. This falls very nicely into the range that on this farm has been established as acceptable using test levels for MUN and other milk components.

Now look at what occurs in a pasture situation.

Pasture
%CP 28%
%SP 25%

When two pounds DM pasture replaces two pounds DM TMR, an additional 1,184 grams soluble protein, and 14.44 pounds starch are provided, calculating out to a ratio of 82.

This change is probably not going to affect the cow a great deal at this point. During times when we have very high soluble protein levels in our haylage, pasture can be used as a dilution, because fresh forages tend to have a lower percent of soluble protein than ensiled feeds.

When the need arises, or should I say, when our cows choose to eat more pasture than the above example, we reevaluate and make further changes.

For example, at five pounds DM intake of pasture (1,208 grams soluble protein and 13.5 pounds starch) our ratio would be 89.48. We have found this higher ration falls outside of the range of 75 - 85, where our cows function best, and so some adjustments need to be made.

What are some of these adjustments? This is the difficult part because there are many ways to change this ratio back to within 75 to 85, but only a few ways can maintain rumen health.

The first obvious change to try is to increase the starch (or carbohydrate) content of the ration. Generally, in high-producing groups or herds, this is not a good choice because cows are already maxed out. You and your nutritionist need to look to see if this is a good choice. It would require an increase in starch to 31.9 percent in our TMR to get back to a ration of 85.

Another change we may try to substitute TMR ingredients to lower the soluble protein percentage. Again, care should be taken. To obtain an 85 ratio in our cows' diet we need to lower soluble protein to 30 percent. This may only be accomplished by substituting with some very high bypass protein ingredients that are generally very expensive.

The way we have maintained a healthy rumen environment during pasture season has been somewhat controversial.

Crude protein percentage is what we change to maintain a 75 to 85 soluble protein-to-starch ratio.

In the example TMR and pasture we have been following, we lowered the TMR crude protein to 14.5 percent which resulted in a ratio of 80. Milk production did not suffer, MUN values stayed near 11 to 12, and our cows appeared quite healthy.

This has been the third summer in which the diets were successfully adjusted for pasture.

Pennsylvania State Grange Praises Dairy Farmers

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) – The Pennsylvania State Grange is proud to recognize the accomplishments of dairy farmers as the organization continues to work to increase producers profitability

"With June being recognized as national and state dairy month, the Pennsylvania State Grange congratulates dairy farmers and their families for providing nutritious foods while pumping over $1.5 billion into the state's economy," William Steel, Pennsylvania State Grange president, said "The Pennsylvania State Grange reaffirms its commitment to be a voice for the dairy industry in legislative affairs."

As an advocate for rural Pennsylvania, the Grange is a leading force in agricultural and rural issues The Grange, with over 30,000 members in 66 countries, is a rural, agricultural and community service organization dedicated to improving the lives of Pennsylvanians through legislative action, offering member services and participating in community affairs.

The Grange recently was successful in convincing the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board to continue the over-order premium of 80 cents per hundredweight due to the ongoing dairy crisis across the Commonwealth

"Dairy farming is an occupation that is vital to the structure and very survival of the family farm," Stell said "Working to preserve it is a paramount issue for a family-based organization like the Grange"

The Grange has actively participated in raising the price paid to dairy farmers during this continuing financial crisis. In September 1996 the Grange successfully helped raise the over-order premium from 50-80 cents, and in September 1997 the Grange successfully helped raise the over-order premium from 50 to 80 cents, and in September 1997, worked to raise it from 80 cents to $1.20 The additional 40-cent increase, which expired April 30, 1998, was granted temporarily after an emergency hearing held at the request of the Grange due to the Drought of 1997

'Dairy farmers face numerous uncertainties and that premium at least adds some financial stability to a very volatile industry," Steel said "Let's face it a profitable farm is a key to the economic well being of rural America We will work to ensure that we maintain the financial health of our rural area"

The Grange is also pleased with a recommendation from Congress to United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) Secretary Dan Glickman urging adoption of Option 1A of the Federal Milk Marketing Orders reform process. A total of 238 House members and 61 Senators signed a letter strongly urging Glickman to select that plan.

Option 1A would basically maintain the current system of calculating Class 1 differentials paid to producers. The option recognizes the need to price fluid milk regionally and to consider items such as transportation costs and supply and demand needs.

"There is no question that this letter sends a clear message to Glickman telling him how important it is to maintain the current structure of Class 1 differentials," Tom Rugg, Director of Legislative Affairs at the National Grange, said. "Pennsylvania Grangers, in conjunction with the other 36 Grange states, were instrumental in informing their legislators about the Grange's support of Option 1A."

The Pennsylvania State Grange urges all citizens to help farmers celebrate dairy month by enjoying their favorite dairy product(s)–whether it be a refreshing tall glass of milk, cheese on a sandwich or a delicious bowl of ice cream on a hot summer day.

PA Farm Bureau Salutes Pennsylvania Dairy Farmers

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — In recognition of Dairy Month, the president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau recently saluted the efficiency and perseverance of Pennsylvania dairymen.

"Being a dairy farmer is a seven-days-a-week, year-round job. On top of the hard work comes the formidable challenges within the industry which dairymen have faced and will continue to encounter," said PFB president Guy Donaldson. "But through it all the dairy industry in Pennsylvania has continued to grow."

While the number of dairymen in Pennsylvania declined by 300 to total 10,200 in 1997, "that decline is in line with a general trend of consolidation in the industry in Pennsylvania over the last 15 years," Donaldson said. "At the same time, statewide milk production continues to increase."

Milk production totaled 10.7 billion pounds in 1997 — up from 10.6 billion pounds in 1996 and 10.4 billion pounds the year before.

"Just a few years ago, Pennsylvania was the fifth largest milk producing state in the nation. Today, we're number four behind California, Wisconsin and New York," Donaldson said. "Pennsylvania now stands a good chance of overtaking New York in the third place spot."

Right now, things are "looking up" for Pennsylvania dairymen, Donaldson said.

"As we head into summer, the outlook for milk prices is good. Cheese prices, which dictate the direction milk checks at the farm will take, have rebounded," he said. "This is largely due to El Nino's effect in holding milk production in check in California. Barring any weather disasters here, a favorable outlook is forecast for Pennsylvania dairymen for the remainder of the year."

Donaldson said that no one can deny the challenges dairymen have faced due to increasingly squeezed profit margins. "Dairymen have responded to a remarkable degree by producing more milk with fewer cows," Donaldson said. "It's amazing to think that all the commercial dairymen in the entire United States could be put into Penn State's Beaver Stadium, which has a seating capacity of around 94,000, without any need for expanding the stadium."

According to figures compiled by the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service, the value of Pennsylvania's dairy production totaled $1.67 billion in 1996 — 14 percent higher than the year before. Meanwhile, cow numbers statewide dropped to 639,000 last year. That was a decline of 5,000 cows from the year before.

Looking at the challenges facing the industry, Donaldson said, "Dairymen are still struggling with the issue of how to capture a larger portion of the consumer dollar. It seems that the dairyman's share has not kept up with the higher price being commanded by the new convenience and 'niche' dairy products now on the market."

As it has in the past, Farm Bureau continues to work in the legislative and regulatory arenas to help dairymen improve their net profits.

In the past year Pennsylvania Farm Bureau has testified before the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board for Class I milk over-order prices, has recommended provisions beneficial to Pennsylvania producers in USDA's federal order restructuring proposal, and has supported legislation to bring Pennsylvania into the Northeast Dairy Compact.

"We firmly believe that a strong dairy industry is vital to the future of agriculture in Pennsylvania," said Donaldson. "We've worked not only to help improve profits, but to control costs through local tax reform, and by keeping a lid on unnecessary and potentially costly environmental and food safety regulations. These are Farm Bureau efforts which benefit all of agriculture, including Pennsylvania's dairymen."

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is a voluntary, statewide farm organization which represents nearly 26,000 farm and rural families in 54 county farm bureaus.

ing little country shows. They went to where established crowds were and sold to tens of thousands of people," Davis said.

"That's why you see other people (and businesses) drawing off of those (established and well-respected) events."

And while 90 percent of the special events are organized and operated by non-professionals, he did note the increase in "traveling shows," usually operated by exhibition companies that attempt to slice away at the broad scope events by claiming to be specialized interest events.

Outdoor activities, such as bass fishing and deer hunting, have experienced the phenomenon of traveling shows in recent years, aimed at novices and highlighted with "stars" and trained or experienced stage entertainers and promoters.

They generally teach little beyond information already available free at a public library, in numerous books, at the local Extension office or land grant universities, or through a local non-profit organization.

Such types of "traveling shows" have been cropping up in other industries — there are traveling shows that deal with an individual's personal growth, selling real estate, setting up small businesses, leadership development, financial well-being (how to get rich quick), and various "shows" sometimes called seminars and workshops.

Davis said he is familiar with the Farm Show, though his experience is limited. He was a student at the Milton Hershey Schools in Hershey from 1968 to 1971 and visited the Farm Show.

"I went to Milton Hershey School, and lived in Philadelphia, and remember going to Farm Show," he said.

He said that, in his opinion and that of the editorial staff, the state Farm Show's greatness comes from its representation of the diversity of Pennsylvania's agricultural industry and community — from its varied livestock, crops and crafts and living skills displays and competitions, youth shows and open division shows, educational displays and commercial exhibitors.

"It has everything agricultural, from 'A' to 'Z.' You can find everything you want to know, so the commercial aspect is very important.

"All of that makes it a well-rounded event. It's the showcase for new equipment and the small business. That's a big part of it.

"The rodeo (doesn't weigh in award consideration) that much. If (the Farm Show) were a pure livestock show, it would have as much impact, if not more," he said. "The rodeo is entertainment. The livestock shows, for kids this is their future, their career, and they're looking for recognition deserved. Whether it's women baking pies, or growing corn, it's something important to this country. I know, speaking for myself and others on the editorial board, we feel this is more important than the rodeo aspect of it."

He said that when the state Farm Show was reviewed for award consideration, Grumbine was not informed.

"Rather than get a tour and be shown the hot spots, we like to experience the same as any other visitor. Traditionally, if we want to meet with the people who run the event, will go through the event and then meet with (show leadership)."

Davis said the award reviewers enjoyed their time in Harrisburg.

"It seemed like everyone (at the Farm Show) was very happy and there were positive events," he said.

For Davis, the Farm Show also represents a quality show accessible to all people, not just those with lots of expendable cash.

"Many events used to be free, now you have to pay for everything.

"What's nice about the Farm Show, it's very reasonable and the people going through it were whole families, and it's been a tradition that most likely will continue.

To actually determine its award winners, Davis said the editorial staff and all members of the Events Alliance vote.

According to Davis, the criteria looked at includes: longetivity of the event, what it means for the community, whether it's a farm show or festival, if it has ties and benefits to non-profitable organizations such as 4-H, how management treats the event (for example, does the management look at the event the same year after year without changes for society changes?), and how friendly the people are who run the event.

Davis said that he has found that many times, if the people managing an event are not friendly, that attitude gets passed on throughout the event down to the people walking through.

He said that at some events those who attend actually get treated in a rough fashion. He said he has been at events with unbelievable rudeness and intimidation with too visible and unecessary security. "You get the feeling of being intimidated, that your not there for a good time, but you're being watched by big brother."

While there have some minor occassional problems with behavior of visitors at the Farm Show, the Pa. State Police and Farm Show security have managed to keep a low profile while helping people enjoy their day without fear of personal safety.

On display will be tractors, implements, trucks, scouts, and numerous related "IH" items.

Prior times were frustrating to the point of wanting exercise lots with no grass.

MUN usage initiated our thinking about rations differently than ever before. We now have a tool that helps us to read our cows and get the diet information directly from them.

Using component evaluation along with physical observation in our cows is serving us very well. Building diets that optimize rumen health and output will always be our first consideration regardless of feeding style or feed components.

We have taken the time to find the best fit for our cows by using records and what generates those records.

Tools, such as ratio of soluble protein-to-starch, have become essential in handling the constant nutritional changes we experience on the farm.

Whether you , your nutritionist, vet, or anyone else who assists in herd management uses this tool, or a similar tool, remember that the repetition of success comes from the knowledge of the past, and this knowledge comes from a sound records program.

Many sources tell us the correct way to feed our cows. I, for one, believe the best way to feed our cows comes from what she tells us in pounds of mil, percent fat, percent soluble protein, MUN, and somatic cell count.

Use industry knowledge for a starting point, but look to the cow to fine tune.

Pasture Growth Rates Recorded In Penn State Study

Editor's Note: Craig Williams, Tioga County extension agent is coordinating a statewide pasture growth study related to rotational grazing. Here's another update of the study.

PA Pasture Growth Charts

This week we are going to look at the pasture growth in two different terms One is Pasture Growth per day and the other is Average Cover These charts will be from the study across PA Several Penn State County agents are measuring pasture growth on Farms in their county and watching how the growth is different across the state

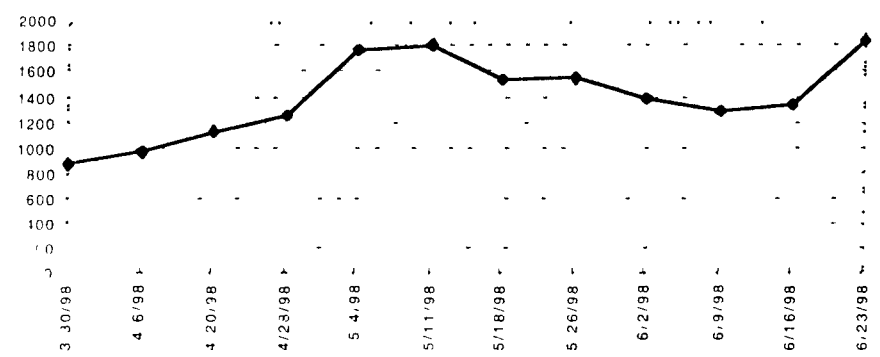
Pasture Growth/day is the paddocks that increased in growth and then the increase is divided by the days between samples For example, if the average of the paddocks increases 700 lbs this week and there were 7 days between sampling, then the average growth would be 100 lbs per day No data on this chart means that all the measured paddocks for that week decreased in lbs of pasture

Ave Pasture Cover is the average amount of grass that is on the all paddocks measured on the farm As you can see the Average Cover tends to increase thru the spring as the grass grows faster than the herd can consume When this is happening a faster rotation can be used or take paddocks out for hay/haylage

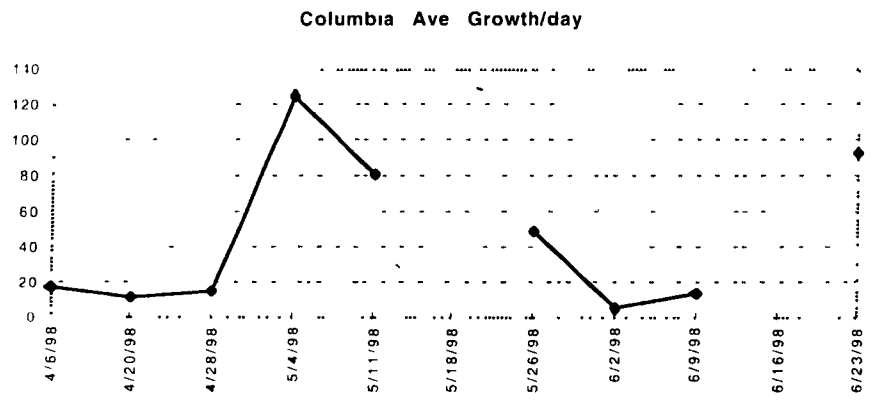
I will have comments about each County Chart and what has affected the graph

Columbia County
Longer rotations on this farm and paddocks were clipped in Late May, see the decrease in growth the week after

Columbia Ave Pasture Cover

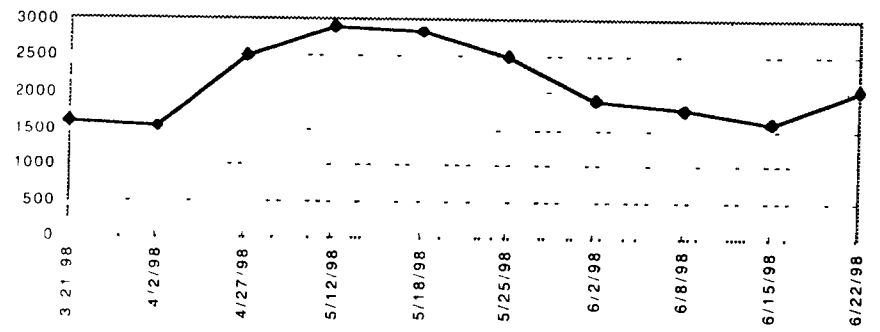


Columbia Ave Growth/day

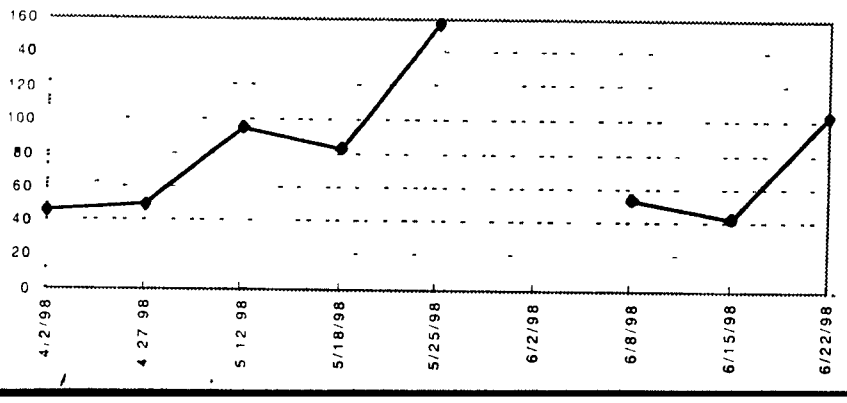


Lancaster County
The paddocks were clipped in early June and this decreases the charts The growth on May 25th is off of one paddock and this average is a little high

Lancaster Pasture Cover

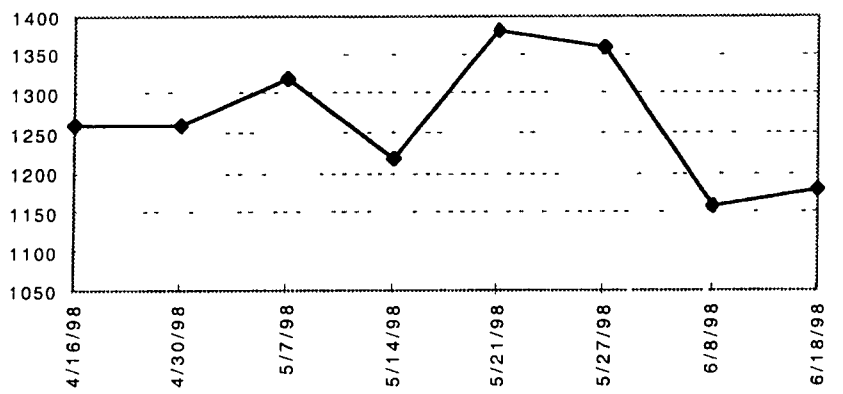


Lancaster Ave Growth/Day

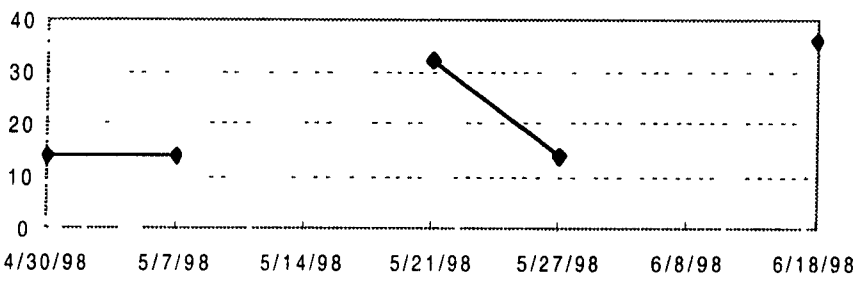


Bradford County
The paddocks were mowed in Early June and see how the charts are affected The spots in the growth/day chart with no data is when all paddocks were grazed or clipped that week

Bradford Pasture Cover

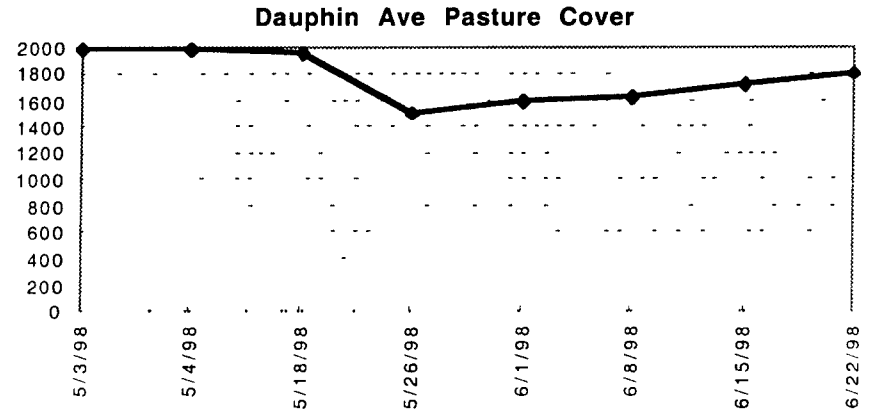


Bradford Growth/day

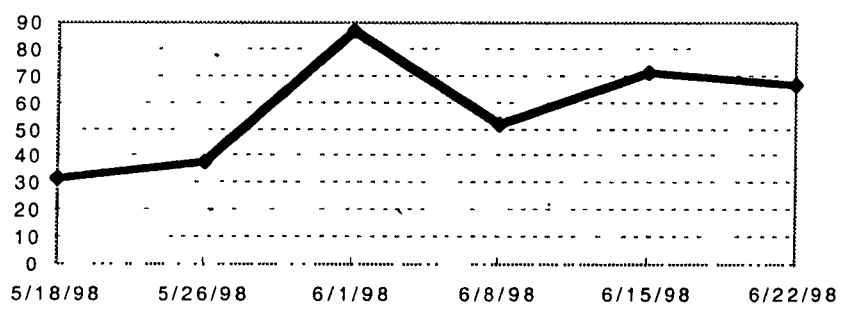


Dauphin County

Dauphin Ave Pasture Cover

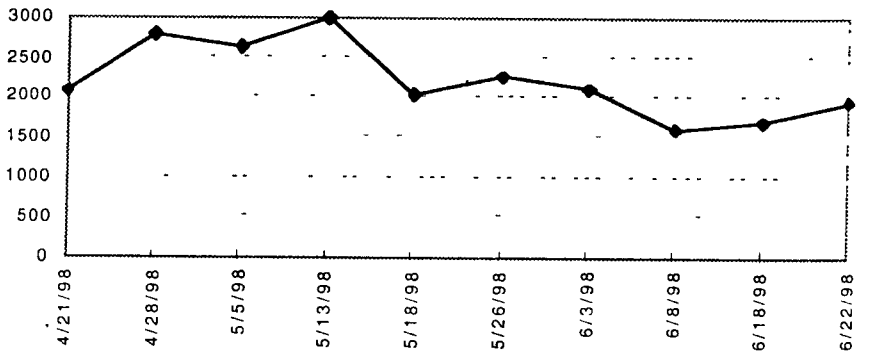


Dauphin Growth/day



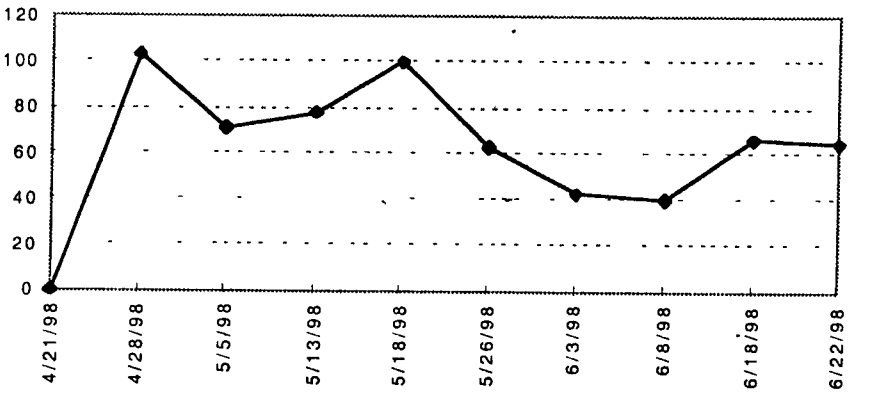
Berks County
Notice the Dry weather effect on the Ave Cover

Berks Ave Pasture Cover



The Berks County Growth/day shows how the dry weather is slowing the growth Most of May the grass was growing 70-100 lbs a day This paddock would gain 700 lbs in a week If your herd needed to eat 1000 lbs per day, this paddock would be ready in two weeks This farm was on two week rotations for some of this time.

Berks Pasture Growth/Day



(Turn to Page A29)

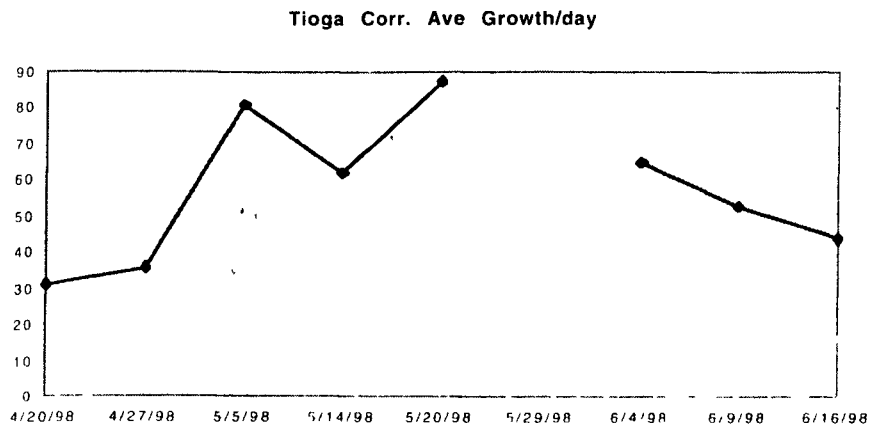
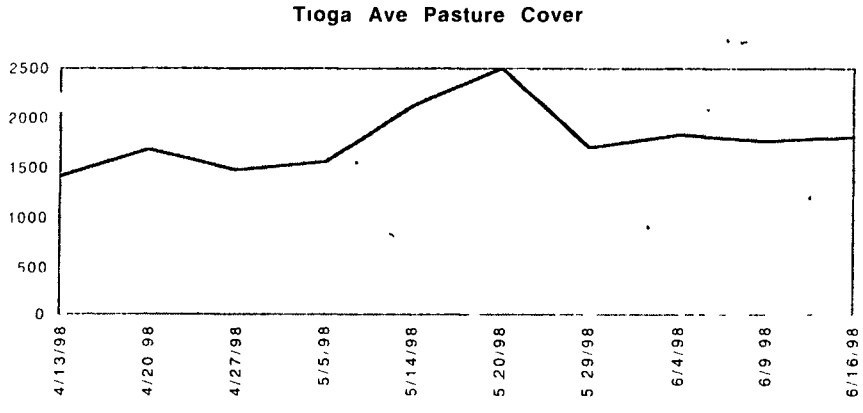
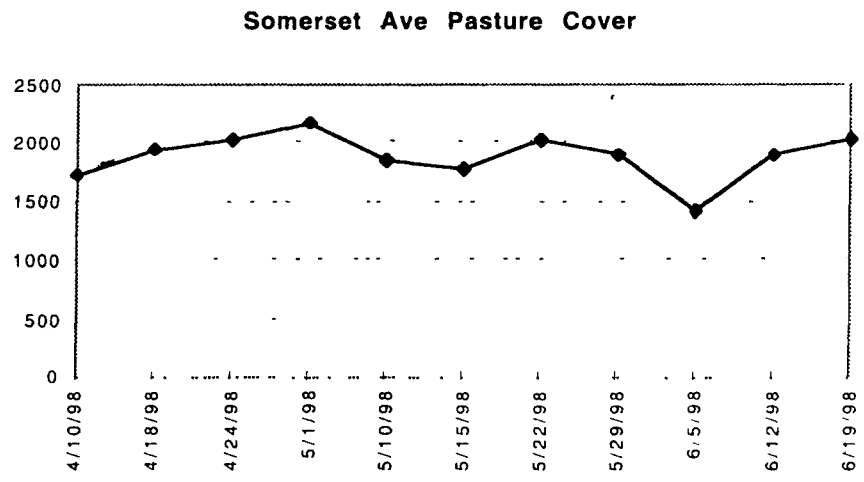
Tioga County, The break in the growth line chart is were the paddocks measured were all grazed and thus there was no growth that week



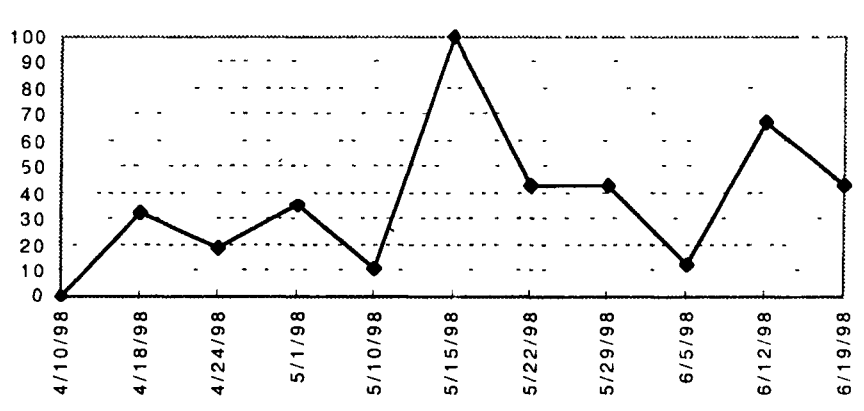
Tioga County, The pasture cover increase this spring as the grass growth increased, the drop in cover on May 29 is mostly from a cooler dry weather that slowed the the growth and the cows were on the paddocks a little longer to clean them up changed from whole day to half day grazings



Somerset County has clipped the pastures in late May and you see how there pasture cover declined Notice how Even the cover was thru the spring a sign of a controlled stocking



The spike on May 15th is from several paddocks growing well and the week before almost all the measured paddocks were grazed, thus not many paddocks were in the average



Entries Due July 1 For National Corn Yield Contest

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — It's the corn grower's equivalent of the World Series, Super Bowl, and Stanley Cup, all rolled into one. But if they want to play in this game, they need to be entered in the National Corn Yield Contest (NCYC) by July 1.

Sponsored by the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA), this popular contest recognizes America's top producers of the nation's number one crop — corn. The information is then shared with all NCGA members in the annual Corn Yield Guide, helping growers learn from each other how to produce the highest yielding, most profitable corn crop. The goal of the NCYC is to educate farmers on methods to improve production and profitability, while addressing environmental concerns.

"Market pressures today are forcing growers to become increasingly competitive," said John Green, director of production and education for the NCGA. "This contest is an excellent way for them to test their own production methods against their peers and to learn from the successful techniques of others."

To be eligible, initial entry forms must be postmarked no later then July 1, 1998, and postharvest entry forms no later than Dec. 1, 1998.

Winners will be announced in February at Commodity Classic, the annual combined convention and trade show of the NCGA and American Soybean Association being held in Albuquerque. Along with national recognition, winners also receive significant prizes from participating seed and crop protection companies.

"We encourage NCYC entrants to gain valuable hands-on experience with new production methods, such as no-till or narrow-row by trying them first on contest plots before adopting them for full farm-scale use," said Green.

The nine contest classes include both dryland and irrigated categories for conventional till, mulch-till, no-till and ridge-till production practices. Farmers compete only with those in similar growing regions, thus greatly increasing their prospect of winning.

For more information or entry forms, contact NCGA at (314) 275-9915, ext. 129 of visit their web site at http://www.nega.com.

Farms Requiring Nutrient Management Plans Need To Come Forward

polluting water.

That is the nature of politics.

In and of itself, the number of plan submissions doesn't mean anything.

The law allows that those farm operators who are operating what is defined under Act 6 as a "concentrated animal operation" have one year from the finalization of nutrient management regulations to submit a plan for consideration.

There are still several months to go, before existing farms have to come forward with a plan.

The state has had no problem with new operations (those operating after Oct. 1, 1997) developing and submitting nutrient management plans.

However, concern is growing that the state's farmers who have been operating high density livestock operations as defined in Act 6 may fail to submit plans on their operations before the Oct. 1 deadline, and that would undermine the promises made by the agricultural community in its political negotiations with environmental and human safety advocates.

In Act 6, and especially in its regulations, agricultural leaders were able to negotiate a program that allows farmers with operations falling under the definition of a CAO to come forward and announce their individual plan for dealing with animal manure, instead of being hunted down and told what they would have to do to stay in business.

Those negotiations were made possible by an attitude in state government that seeks to remove the historically adversarial roles played by farmers and environmental government.

The negotiations were also made possible by assuring agricultural opponents that Pennsylvania's agricultural industry could and would cooperate and take care of the situation without "Big Brother."

Essentially, the reputation of the farmer as a responsible steward and the "first environmentalist" was put on the line.

Now some of those people who represented the farming community in those negotiations are growing concerned, because the relatively few plans submitted makes it appear as though the environmentalists were right in assuming that farmers would not comply without the heavy hand of government breathing down their neck.

The reason for the concern expressed at the NMAB meeting was three-fold:

• Earlier, though unofficial, state estimates of the number of CAOs in Pennsylvania were that as many as 2,500 existing farms would be required to submit nutrient management plans.

If that estimate is even near correct, it would mean that about 2,450 farmers across the state will have to submit nutrient management plans for approval by Oct. 1.

• The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has created its own national program through authority granted partially through the Clean Streams Law and partially through the National Pollution Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) that seeks to require permits for what it calls "concentrated animal feeding operations (CAFOs)." The EPA requirements essentially pose a challenge to Pennsylvania's nutrient management program.

Included in this issue of Lancaster Farming, is a proposal by the state Deparment of Environmental Protection to modify the state nutrient management program to require additional permits, among some other proposed requirements. Farmers are urged to read and comment on the proposal for EPA compliance.

However, if Pennsylvania is seen as not having an effective state-run nutrient management program, it leaves room for those who seek federal or tighter controls to move further against state control.

• The Maryland state government has adopted a strict, mandatory phosphorus- and nitrogen-based nutrient management program that threatens all of its farming enterprises, not just its integrated poultry operations.

According to agricultural leaders and state officials, the bottom line is this: If the general population gets the impression that Pennsylvania farmers are attempting to spit in the eye of responsible nutrient management, then strict and heavy handed regulations can be expected to follow.

Maryland's action is an example of how quickly the non-farming community can act to create laws controlling farming.

In the meantime, there are to be better efforts made to identity those farms in Pennsylvania needing mandatory nutrient management plans.

The effort now is to improve the estimate so that compliance by the farming community can be better gauged.

In related business, there was some discussion during the meeting that there have to be farms requiring nutrient management plans that already have plans in place, though they aren't the official state plans.

These would be those plans that were lender-mandated, Chesapeake Bay nutrient management plans, and those required by local municipalities.

In other words, it was suggested that there may well be many farms in Pennsylvania that already have good plans in operation that should be easy to convert into official nutrient management plans.

An official certified plan writer needs to do that.

Existing official Chesapeake Bay Program nutrient management plans can be converted without cost into a state-approved nutrient management plan by working with a participating conservation district that has staff able to write plans.

The other two types of nutrient management plans (those made to satisfy local government or a lender) require that either a certified farmer write his own plan, or that a commercially certified writer be hired to write the plan up as an official state plan.

There apparently have been no problems with getting plan submissions from new operations or from those existing farms that are changing operations and livestock density to the point where a plan is mandatory, according to state officials.

Some reported costs for writing plans for a 100-acre farm ranged from $600 to $800.

However, some farmers may be reluctant to pay this fee, especially if they are already following an operational plan that accounts for nutrient applications, crop needs and storm water controls, and that basically only needs to be recorded and submitted as a nutrient management plan.

However, there is state cost-sharing for writing mandatory and voluntary plans for operations already in existance as of Oct. 1, 1997.

Cost Sharing

The nutrient managment plan cost sharing program is called "Pennsylvania's Plan Development Incentives Program."

It identifies four different payment catagories according to whether the farm is 50 acres or more, or less than 50 acres.

Those plans written by commercial writers for farms less than 50 acres provides 75 percent of the actual costs, not to exceed $250.

For commercially developed plans on farms of 50 acres or more, the state will pay 75 percent of the actual costs, not to exceed $4 per acre or $800 per operation.

For those plans written by a farmer for his own operation, the cost share for farms less than 50 acres is $200 per operation.

For those with a farm larger than 50 acres who are certified to write their own plan, the cost share is $3 per acre, not to exceed $800 per operation.

(The cost share rates are subject to change, though this information was provided this week and is expected to remain for some time.)

From Oct. 1, 1997 to Sept. 30, 1998, the cost-share funds are to be used only for those farms (CAOs) needing mandatory plans.

After Sept. 30, cost-sharing is to be expanded to help pay for those volunteering to submit nutrient management plans.

Those seeking cost-sharing need to apply before doing any activities or incurring expenses that will be sought to be cost-shared. The program will only pay for the costs of planning after an application is approved.

For more information on cost-sharing, contact a local conservation district. They should have brochures explaining the program in more detail.

Also of note for those who intend to use commercial plan developers, is that the plan-writing industry has become competitive, so state officials have said that if plan writing cost estimates seem excessive, farmers may wish to shop around.

Conservation districts are to provide farmers seeking nutrient managment plans with a list of the names of commercially certified plan writers.

For those who may not be certain whether their operation falls under the non-mandatory or the mandatory catagory, contact a local conservation district for help in making that determination.

There are some simple calculations that can be made to quickly determine whether a plan is necessary or not by Oct. 1.

Nevertheless, whether an individual knows the status of his operation or not, those who need the plans can face fines or possibly being shut down for not coming forward and submitting plans.

Some farmers may not consider their operations a farm of concern because of its small land base.

Ironically, about half of those 2,500 farms estimated to be required to submit a mandatory nutrient management plan by Oct. 1 were very small farms, with less than 10 acres.

The size of the farm isn't important. What is important is the stocking rate of livestock and the amount of land suitable for applying nutrients in manure at a level that does not exceed those required by the crops in the field.

According to state officials, there is no reason to consider a delay in applying for cost-share funds.

There was $500,000 in the state budget allocated to be used in the 1997-98 fiscal year ending June 30, and another $500,000 for the 1998-98 state fiscal year.

Department Of Environmental Protection Proposes Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations Compliance Strategy

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Under an aggressive campaign promoted through the President Clinton Administration to enforce the nation's Clean Water Act, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has issued some new regulations covering livestock operations.

The new buzzword concerning the new regulations is an acronym: CAFO.

It is short for "concentrated animal feeding operation."

In effect, the EPA has created a form of national nutrient management and is requiring some farms to have discharge permits under the National Pollutional Discharge Elimination System (farms are considered non-point discharge sources of nutrients, therefore even if it is non-point, it is still discharge), as well as some other control measures that could conflict with and undermine Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management Act and the partnership relationship that has developed between the state and its agricultural community.

Targeted through EPA's aggressive action are high density livestock facilities — large broiler houses, large confinement swine operations, stock yards, feed lots, dairy facilities, etc.

Pennsylvania has created its own program for dealing with these historically recent agricultural production operations — Act 6, also known as the Nutrient Management Act.

In order to comply with the federal program and retain as much as possible of Pennsylvania's existing Nutrient Management Act regulations and guidelines, the state Department of Environmental Protection has proposed some ways to modify the state program so that it achieves the same environmental goals EPA seeks, while remaining a state-controlled program.

This proposal was published June 13 in the Pennsylvania Bulletin. There are 60 days for comment and several public hearings and meetings scheduled.

The proposal is reprinted here so that readers of Lancaster Farming may comment on the logic and workability of the proposal, as well as stay abreast of what additional work and permits may be required in order to farm competitively using modern production technology.

The proposal can also be found on the Lancaster Farming home page at http://www.lancasterfarming.com

Included near the end of the proposal are the tentatively scheduled hearing/meetings where comments can be made about it, as well as the address and person to whom comments can be made.

Department Of Environmental Protection Proposes Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations Compliance Strategy

Purpose

This proposal describes the present methods used to control the water quality impacts of manure from Pennsylvania farms and outlines a proposed strategy for the state to comply with the concentrated animal feeding operation (CAFO) requirements of the federal Clean Water Act

Concentrated animal feeding operations are growing in size and number in Pennsylvania. This strategy integrates tools already in place to control excess nutrient runoff, like the newly implemented Nutrient Management Act and the experience of the last 10 years in the Chesapeake Bay Program, with the new permitting requirements.

The intent of this proposed strategy is to ensure that all concentrated animal feeding operations are constructed and managed in an environmentally sound manner, while ensuring agricultural producers the opportunity to pursue agricultural production which is profitable, economically feasible, and based on sound technology and practical production which is profitable, economically feasible, and based on sound technology and practical production techniques.

The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) is providing several opportunities for public input into developing this strategy in addition to the normal public comment period and hearings.

The Department is also working with the State Conservation Commission (SCC), the Department of Agriculture (PDA), county conservation districts, DEP's Citizens Advisory Council, the Agriculture Advisory Board, the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, Farmers Union and State Grange, Chesapeake Bay Foundation, Nutrient Management Advisory Board, Natural Resources Conservation Service, members of the General Assembly and other stakeholders.

In addition, some elements of this proposal will require new regulations to create Water Quality Management Part II permit and individual NPDES permit requirements specifically applicable to CAFOs. These more specific regulations and procedures will have the benefit of additional public review and comment before they become final

Implementation of this strategy will also require additional educational and technical assistance efforts and exploring new techniques and technologies for safely managing manure Implementation can be accomplished with existing staff resources

Background

When properly managed, manure is an important source of natural nutrients for agriculture crops Properly applying manure to the land will not cause water quality problems

Modern methods of raising hogs, chickens and other livestock frequently concentrate animals inside buildings or in confined feedlots, rather than using more traditional pasture management and feeding practices This trend in livestock and poultry production will continue, resulting in increased number of concentrated animal feeding operations in both Pennsylvania and across the nation.

Economics of scale and modern technology are driving the establishment of these new concentrated livestock and poultry operations as farm families adjust to changing economic realities and world competition. Modern technology allows for increased efficiency in livestock production which is necessary for Pennsylvania's agricultural industry to stay competitive at home, in America, and on the global scene.

For example, while may existing swine operations in the Commonwealth house several hundred sows, many new operations are typically being designed to house 2,500 or more sows. The increasing animal numbers and concentration currently occurring in the swine industry are similar to the increase experienced in the poultry industry over the last 15 years. Likewise, as the number and concentration of animals increases on these operations, the size of manure storage facilities also increases, with some facilities exceeding 1 million gallons of storage.

While operations may vary in size, typically manure is cleaned out of the livestock buildings or from feedlots and stored until it can be spread on farm fields, sold to other farmers or composted When CAFOs and manure storage facilities are properly designed, constructed and managed, manure from these operations can continue to be an agronomically important and environmentally safe source of nutrients and soil organic matter necessary for the production of food, fiber, and good soil health.

If CAFOs and manure storage facilities are improperly designed, constructed and managed, nutrients from these operations can threaten water quality. Standards for these facilities must ensure that manure storage facilities are structurally sound and do not leak into surface or ground water, that manure and nutrients applied to fields and pastures do not exceed what is needed for actual crop production (agronomic uptake), that manure and nutrients are not lost to crop production or impact water quality because of accelerated runoff or erosion, and that runoff from barnyards and feeding areas is property controlled.

Present Requirements

Over the past several years, the Departments of Environmental Protection and Agriculture, the State Conservation Commission, county conservation districts and Pennsylvania farm organizations have developed and implemented a series for requirements to prevent adverse water quality impacts from farms and concentrated animal feeding operations.

Under the state Clean Streams Law, DEP adopted requirements covering the storage, handling and application of manure in 1977. These requirements (25PA Code Chapter 101) have been updated regularly and apply to all operations that produce, store or apply manure by regulating the design, construction and operation of all manure storage facilities and rates of manure application.

Working with the Agriculture Advisory Committee, State Grange and other groups, DEP developed the Manure Management for Environmental Protection Manual that outlines design and storage requirements for swine, dairy, poultry and other operations that outline design and storage requirements If these practices are not followed, Chapter 101 allows DEP to require individual permits to cover the design and building of manure handling facilities. (DEP will update the Manure Management for Environmental Protection Manual next year in light of requirements contained in the regulations implementing the Nutrient Management Act and new Natural Resources Conservation Service design standards)

The requirements in the Manure Management for Environmental Protection Manual are implemented with the assistance of county conservation districts, the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and DEP field staff. Incidents of non-compliance are typically investigated first by county conservation districts and local representatives of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau. If the issues cannot be resolved by voluntary compliance measures, DEP can't take enforcement actions (i.e. compliance orders, penalties). This is especially true where problems cause a threat to water quality.

On October 1, 1997 a new set of statewide requirements designed to protect water quality became effective (25 PA Code Chapter 83). Chapter 83 was established under the Nutrient Management Act of 1993 and assures proper handling and application of manure from concentrated animal operations. Pennsylvania, at present, is the only state that requires farm to have Nutrient Management Plans. The Nutrient Management Act requires Nutrient Management Plus for concentrated animal operations which have animal densities exceeding 2,000 pounds of animal weight per acre of land available for manure spreading.

The State Conservation Commission developed regulations outlining requirements for Nutrient Management Plans based on Pennsylvania's experience with the Chesapeake Bay Program and the input of the Nutrient Management Advisory Board, DEP, the Department of Agriculture and other stakeholders.

The Nutrient Management Act requires plans be developed by a nutrient management specialist certified by the Department of Agriculture. The Plans are reviewed by certified nutrient management specialists employed by county conservation districts which have the responsibility for overseeing plan implementation, maintenance, record keeping and compliance.

Nutrient Management Plans must contain the following elements:

- Description of the farm operation
- Identification of the operator
- A determination of available nutrients from all sources to be used on the land, nutrients needed by crops, and nutrient application rates and procedures
- Adoption of Best Management Practices for manure management to protect surface and ground water including control measures around barnyard and feed lot areas and manure storage facilities based on standards in DEP's Manure Management For Environment Protection Manual and the Pennsylvania Technical Guide.
- Best management practices to control soil erosion and runoff to address critical runoff areas
- Identification of alternative manure storage areas to be used in cases where normal manure handling procedures described in the plan cannot be followed
- Plan implementation schedule
- Certification statement signed by the operator to ensure plan will be implemented
- Each plan must be re-evaluated by a certified specialist at least once every three years.

Nutrient Management Plans are required for approximately 2,500 concentrated animal operations in Pennsylvania. In addition, both the Nutrient Management Act and regulations encourage non-regulated farming operations to develop and implement voluntary nutrient management plans. The State Conservation Commission, county conservation districts, DEP and the Department of Agriculture strongly encourage all livestock and poultry farmers to prepare and implement Nutrient Management Plans for their operations.

To help promote the implementation of proper manure management, the Department of Agriculture, State Conservation Commission and the state Treasury Department are working to make available $25 million in low interest loans to farmers to implement best management practices for manure storage and handling. This assistance will supplement cost share funds already available in the Chesapeake Bay drainage area, as well as federal EQIP funds and other local, state and federal funding available statewide

In addition to these regulatory requirements, Pennsylvania's Chesapeake Bay Program has worked since 1985 to reduce the nutrient load to the Bay by providing education, technical and financial assistance to farmers in the Bay drainage area to plan and implement proper manure storage and application practices The Chesapeake Bay Program is a cooperative effort of county conservation districts, DEP, the State Conservation Commission, Department of Agriculture, U.S Environmental Protection Agency, the Natural Resource Conservation Service and other agencies

More than 900 manure management projects worth $32 million have been financed through the Chesapeake Bay Program. More than 400,000 acres of farmland have already been covered by voluntary manure/nutrient management plans to help ensure excess nutrients do not get into the streams and rivers flowing to the Bay. Standards contained in the Pennsylvania Technical Guide and nutrient management regulations are in place which guide the design and construction of manure storage facilities.

Federal Requirements

The federal Clean Water Act and the federal national Pollution Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) Program regulations (40 CFR 122.23) require states to develop water quality permitting requirements to cover concentrated animal feeding operations "Concentrated animal feeding operations" are defined as operations with either more than 1,000 animal units, or operations with 301 to 1,000 animal units which have the potential to discharge to surface waters.

To meet this federal mandate, DEP proposes to set requirements for three different categories of proposed concentrated animal feeding operations: (1) operations with 301 to 1,000 animal equivalent units, (2) operations of more than 1,000 animal equivalent units, and (3) any operation with a discharge to surface water The requirements in each category are designed to take both size and potential to have an an adverse impact on water quality into account.

For this strategy, definitions for terms, such as animal equivalent units and manure storage facility, from the Nutrient Management Act and program will be used to ensure consistency between state programs The sue of Animal Equivalent Units (AEU) from the Nutrient Management Act in place of the federally defined Animal Units (AU) will provide consistency between Pennsylvania programs and will be as protective as the federal requirements as demonstrated in the box below:

> An AEU and an AU each represents 1000 pounds of animal weight. The federal unit is based on an average weight for each type of animal (for example, a dairy cow is 700 lbs, therefore 1 4 cows= 1AU; a pig is 400 lbs, thus 2.5 pigs=1AU) The PA AEU is based on real animal weights broken down into categories, such as, a Holstein cow is 1300 lbs. or 0.77 Holsteins = 1 AEU, and pigs may be counted as gestating sows at 400 lbs (where 2.5 gestating sows = 1 AEU), sows with litter at 470 lbs (2.13 sows with litter = 1 AEU), or other categories

Existing operations would also be determined to be CAFO's based on AEUs and evaluated based on requirements already in place as a basis for permit coverage. It is possible that changes or new requirements at the federal level may necessitate additional conditions for the permits in the future.

To the extent possible, the requirements for existing operations will use the extensive set of design and management standards already in place. This works out well because of the overlap between confined animal operations covered by Pennsylvania's 1993 Nutrient Management Act and the federal NPDES regulations.

DEP proposes to implement requirements in these CAFO categories:

(Turn to Page A33)

Department Of Environmental Protection Proposes

1. Proposed Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations With 301 to 1,000 Animal Equivalent Units and a Potential to Discharge to Surface Water

This category of smaller concentrated animal feeding operations includes those new operations from 301 to 1,000 animal equivalent units and that have a potential to discharge to surface water. DEP considers any operation within this size category that must comply with the requirements of the state Nutrient Management Act as having a potential to discharge to surface water. DEP will maintain a registry of CAFOs in this category based upon information submitted by the county conservation districts.

The required elements are as follow:

1) A Nutrient Management Plan, including a Contingency Plan for emergency planning and response to manure spills and related discharges that have been submitted for approval to the county conservation district (CCD). The Plan is approved at a regularly scheduled meeting of the county conservation district board, as provided by the Nutrient Management Act.

2) A Chapter 102 Erosion and Sediment Control Plan for earth disturbances related to the building or manure storage facility available on site at all times during construction, and approved by the county conservation district if applicable.

3) An Erosion and Sediment Control Plan for the acreage where manure will be applied, as required by the regulations in Chapter 102.

4) For earth disturbances of 5 acres or more, an NPDES Permit for Stormwater Discharges Associated with a Construction Activity:

a) General Permit coverage insured by CCD for waters that are not designated for special protection, or

b) Individual Permit issued by DEP in special protection waters.

5) Consistent with the Nutrient Management regulations, certification by a registered professional engineer that the design for the manure storage facility complies with the Pennsylvania Technical Guide. In addition, the engineer and construction contractor shall certify to the State Conservation Commissionor CCD that the facility was completed according to the design and construction standards in the Pennsylvania Technical Guide.

6) Public participation: Public hearings/meetings will be announced in the Pennsylvania Bulletin and in a local newspaper for all proposed CAFOs that require DEP action for an individual stormwater/construction permit in Exceptional Value watersheds Local government shall be given notice of the application for any necessary permits. Public meetings/hearings on DEP required actions in other CAFOs with 301 to 1000 AEUs will be held if there is significant public interest

Meeting the above elements would fulfill the requirements for coverage under a general NPDES permit by rule for this category of CAFO The general NPDES permit by rule is being proposed as an amendment to Chapter 92 This coverage would be documented through the certification statement that is now required as part of the Nutrient Management Plan review and approval process

2. Proposed Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations over 1,000 Animal Equivalent Units

An individual CAFO NPDES permit would be required for a proposed concentrated animal feeding operation of more than 1,000 animal units. A Water Quality Management Part II permit would also be required for construction and operation of any new manure storage facility.

Existing requirements, particularly those under the Nutrient Management Act, form the basis for the required permits for this category of CAFOs.

The required elements are as follow;

1) A Nutrient Management Plan, including a Contingency Plan for emergency planning and response to manure spills and related discharges, that has been submitted for approval to the county conservation district (CCD). The Plan is approved at a regularly scheduled meeting of the county conservation district board, as provided by the Nutrient Management Act.

2) A Chapter 102 Erosion and Sediment Control Plan for earth disturbances related to the building or manure storage facility available on site at all times during construction, and approved by the county conservation district if applicable.

3) An Erosion and Sediment Control Plan for the acreage where manure will be applied, as required by the regulations in Chapter 102.

4) For earth disturbances of 5 acres of more, an NPDES Permit for Stormwater Discharges Associated with a Construction Activity:

a) General Permit coverage issued by the CCD for waters that are not designated for special protection, or

b) Individual Permit issued by DEP in special protection waters.

5) A Water Quality Management Part II Permit for Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations over 1,000 AEUs

Applicants for these permits must submit a complete and accurate application for a manure storage facility prior to its construction and operation. Part II Permits cover the structural and operational integrity of the manure storage facility, require that the design and pre- and post construction inspections be carried out by a Pennsylvania registered professional engineer. The Part II Permit application includes siting/design plans and specifications, such as for liners for the manure storage facility. Special conditions of the Part II Permit include monitoring requirements, control of barnyard runoff, and responsibility of the permittee for application of all manure generated. DEP has developed draft design standards based on the Pennsylvania Technical Guide, the Manure Management for Environmental Protection Manual, and other sources for the part II permits for these CAFOs. These standards are being proposed with the opportunity for public comment before the final version of the Part II permits will be used to carry out the final strategy.

6) A Preparedness, Prevention and Contingency (PPC) Plan would be required to address the accidental release into surface or ground water from on-site use during construction and operation, handling or storage of all chemicals, including pesticides, fertilizers, or petroleum products.

7) Individual NPDES permits would require CAFOs to submit information about their operation including buffer distances to protected streams, facility monitoring, where necessary, barnyard management practices and best management practices to prevent surface water impacts. The NPDES permit is also proposed for public comment.

8) Public participation - DEP will provide the opportunity for public comment when the Department must take a formal permitting action by publishing a notice of a public meeting/hearing and receipt of the Part II and NPDES permit applications in the Pennsylvania Bulletin and in a local newspaper, and by notifying the affected municipalities. A pubic hearing would be required for facilities in Exceptional Value watersheds and could be requested by the public in other watershed. The facility operator, county conservation district, and local officials will be encouraged to participate in the meetings/hearings. DEP will also publish notice in the Pennsylvania Bulletin and a newspaper upon final action on the permits.

The operator of the CAFO is required to notify the local governments and provide newspaper notice to the public of applications for DEP permits. Nutrient Management Plans are approved at public meetings of local CCDs where public input can be received.

Public comment periods for both the individual NPDES and Part II permits would be coordinated with the time periods given county conservation districts to review Nutrient Management Plans in order to allow the interested public the opportunity to comment on all aspects of the operation at one time All public comments received would have to be considered and responded to before DEP could take final action on the permit applications

The Department, State Conservation Commitee and Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture will work together to ensure compliance with these requirements under the state Clean Streams Law and the Nutrient Management Act

3. Existing Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations over 1000 Animal Equivalent Units

In the next three years, DEP will assess the integrity of existing manure storage facilities of existing concentrated animal feeding operations over 1,000 AEUs DEP will assess facilities in High Quality and Exception Value watershed ares first.

Existing concentrated animal feeding operations would not be required to obtain a Part II permit, unless they expand or replace the manure storage facility. These existing operations would be required to meet the other applicable elements (described in 1 or 2 above) for proposed CAFOs of the same size.

EPA requires existing concentrated animal feeding operations to obtain an NPDES permit. Certification of the integrity of existing manure storage facilities is a required element for obtaining the NPDES permit for an existing CAFO.

4. All Animal Operations With Discharges to Surface Water

All animal operation with a direct discharge, or a discharge through a man-made device, to surface waters under normal operating conditions are required to obtain an individual NPDES permit for discharging wastewater into the waters of the Commonwealth. These operations may or may not be CAFOs. The discharges will be covered by NPDES permits that include effluent limitations as well as other terms and conditions like other treatment and discharge facilities. If the operation involves the spreading of manure, it will also be subject to the applicable nutrient management requirements. A Part II permit would also be required for construction and operation of the wastewater treatment facility.

Compliance

DEP, the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and County Conservation Districts will cooperatively address complaints concerning CAFOs Operations of CAFOs, like all other NPDES and PART II permit holders, will be subject to self inspection and record keeping as part of their NPDES and Part II Permits Ensuring compliance with requirements relating to the permits and other enforcement will be carried out by DEP. Where DEP determines non-compliance has occurred, appropriate action will be initiated to abate pollution.

DEP will inspect all CAFOs with over 1000 AEUs annually The department will also require that a Pennsylvania registered Professional Engineer's certification of the structural integrity of the manure storage facilities to be included with each renewal application for an NPDES permit.

Land Use Issue

The state Clean Streams Law and the Nutrient Management Act authorize DEP, the Department of Agriculture and the State Conservation Commission to take steps to prevent water pollution from concentrated animal feeding operations. These laws do not give those agencies the ability or legal responsibility to determine if these operations are an appropriate land development activity for any local community.

Interim Policy

On January 16, 1998 DEP released an interim policy covering the consideration of permit applications for any concentrated animal feeding operations received by DEP before this proposed strategy is fully implement. Applications for Part II Permits received under the interim policy will be reviewed by DEP at the same time public comment is being accepted on the long term strategy and permit application forms Permits will not be issued until all comments on the strategy and on the permit applications are considered.

A copy of the interim policy is available upon request. Contact Carol Young or see the DEP website at the addresses listed at the end of this document cows, 300 laying hens, and 10 acres tobacco.

Walnut Run Is Farming At Its Best

"Mother was involved in all the work. With the help of friends, uncles, aunts, and a hired man, we kept farming," Myer said of those early years after his father's death.

He continued, "I wasn't interested in schooling. Back then, that was fine because hard work fit the bill when it came to farming."

Hard work is something Myer relishes. After high school, Myer and his mother formed a partnership. Five years later, which was in 1968, Myer and his younger brother John formed a partnership, and their mother was able to devote time to other interests.

In the meantime, Myer married Dot, his high school sweetheart, and his brother married Judy. Together the two families form a great working partnership. Myer is considered the general manager who pays the bills and oversees the cropping and does the nightime milking. His brother oversee. the dairying.

"It works, I guess, because I'm the aggressor and my brother is the follower. It's been that way since we were growing up, but we try to be sensitive to one another," the older brother said of their relationship.

Under both brothers' oversight, the dairy herd was expanded to 40 cows, then to 50 cows, to 120, then to 275. Three adjoining farms were purchased. In 1965, Myer started farming potatoes, and today raises 100 acres for potato chips. Harvesting starts Aug. 15 and continues sometimes as late as Dec. 15.

In addition to potatoes, they farm 500 acres of corn. In the past they sold the excess, but in recent years they need it to feed their own herd. They stopped raising chickens and tobacco.

New technology means making some changes. In recent years, the farm is leaning away from registered Holsteins to concentrating on raising a top-producing commercial breed.

"About half the herd is registered, but we are into raising a commercial milk producing herd and not into selling cows," Myer said. "It saves us extra paperwork and time."

Myer said that they use every available technology to increase herd averages, which is 25,200 pounds and rising.

Dot is in charge of the calves from births to two months of age. The heifers are integrated into the herd and the bull calves are raised to about 800 pounds and then sold.

Calf numbers vary from 40 to 90 head to feed twice daily.

"Dot does a great job. She hardly loses any," Myer said.

"It's just like taking care of a baby. I like the challenge and seeing each develop its own personality," Dot said.

She's a stickler for cleanliness.

"You can't be too particular," she said.

In 1995, the Myers had an outbreak of salmonella and lost several calves. Despite extensive testing, they could not determine what was contaminating the herd, so now they vaccinate to keep cows in top condition.

Calves are taken from their mothers immediately but housed close enough to be licked by the mothers. The calves are fed one gallon of colostrum for the first two feedings and mother's milk for the remainder of the first week. The calves are bottle-fed for three and four days and then introduced to the bucket.

Grain is introduced when the calves are three days old. Milk replacement is used for the first eight weeks. Weaning begins at seven weeks and is completed when the calf eats three pounds of grain.

Plans are to increase the herd to 400 head within the next few months and then to 500 next year.

Myer is the first to say that his decision wasn't based only on his love for work or to make the operation more profitable.

Again and again, he says, "I pray for wisdom daily. We are stewards of what God has given us. We want to be productive, useable vessels."

He's quick to credit God with the success of their operation. He said, "The Bible says, you have not because you ask not. I guess I ask for a lot."

Despite their prayers, life hasn't been trouble-free. The most devastating event was losing their only son who died when he was 13 years old from a motorcycle accident on the farm.

"You never forget it," Myer said of the void his son's death has left on their lives. At the same time, the couple believe it was God's will.

"We committed our children to him and that means for whatever reason, God wanted to use him in that way," Dot said.

That assurance has enabled them to continue life, enjoying the good things that come their way.

The couple has a married daughter and a grandchild. Their daughter and her husband are not interested in farming and neither are the two children of partners John and Judy.

"Some people say why are you building up the farm if you don't have a son or daughter to pass it on to?" Myer said.

He shrugs and then adds, "Who knows? Maybe one of our grandchildren will want to farm when we're ready to retire. Or, maybe it will be an opportunity for someone else."

Although the family doesn't have children working on the farm, they do have six full-time and a few part-time employees. This summer, for the first time, the family has an employee living with them. They are thrilled that things are working out well with a live-in employee.

Sara Holmes, a college ag business student, is from a smaller New York family farm. She wants to experience a lot of different farm jobs before making a decision as to where she fits in the larger scheme of the ag community.

"She jumps out of bed and wants to work," Myer said of Sara's putting in 15-18 hours daily. "She's bright and can talk shop. She knows a lot."

Maintaining a good working relationship with employees is important to Myer. He said, "Most farmers haven't grown up with that orientation. We need to learn to delegate, compliment, and think of ways to let them excel."

He's had a few long-time employees who eventually left to start farming on their own.

Myer derives a lot of satisfaction from this. "I'd like to keep them, but it's important to train and let go," he said of employees.

As a good steward of the earth, Myer is conservation-minded and uses conservation tillage to conserve the soil. He is an advocate of no-till, but said, "It doesn't work here because of the amount of manure we have to get rid of."

He uses soil tests, fertilizing consulting services, and field scouts to determine how to manage the soil.

"My wife is a real support. She is more detailed than I am, more to keep things clean. I am more volume oriented and want to get things done quick.

Dot's passion for farming extends far beyond the acreage of their own farm. she is Lancaster County coordinator for Ag in the Classroom. She began helping in the Manheim Central district in 1985.

"I like to educate people about agriculture and how important it is and how much it plays a part in everyone's life," she said.

"My goal is to get in touch with all the schools and put together a top-notch quality Ag-in-the-Classroom program," she said.

While classroom teaching sessions and farm videos can be shown, Dot believes there is nothing as educational as walking through a working farm.

In a way the Myer farm is everyone's farm. It's the place where a five day camp has been held for the past 15 years. School students and 4-H'ers tour the dairy facilities and hold picnics on the expansive lawn.

"I consider it a real priviledge to live here, and we want to share it with others," Dot said.

In fact, the new facilities are being designed to enable visitors to watch the milking process.

The Myers will be building a new free stall barn and a milking center.

"It will probably be a double 12 but not decided if it will be a herringbone or parallel," Myer said.

To make the expansion, the Myer family will need to buy additional cows. They are wary of the risks of introducing a new herd.

"We are particular in how heifers are raised. It goes a long way in production and herd health," Myer said.

"Genetics are important. In recent years, genetics came a long way. Genetics overall has improved so much that almost every stud has the potential to produce if combined with other successful management practices," Myer said.

Although the family takes some vacations, they'd rather work on the farm than spend time at commercial vacation spots. They've taken a week to help with a mission project in Kentucky and they've gone snowmobiling at Yellowstone.

Their idea of the perfect farm vacation is touring other farms. Recently they took several day trips, mostly to the New York area to tour farms in order to get ideas for expansion.

"Every farm does the same thing a little bit differently. It's a great way to come away with some fresh, creative ideas," Myer said.

Although Myer said that he wasn't much of a student in school because he wanted to be a farmer, he now adamently supports higher education as a tremendous boost to successful farming.

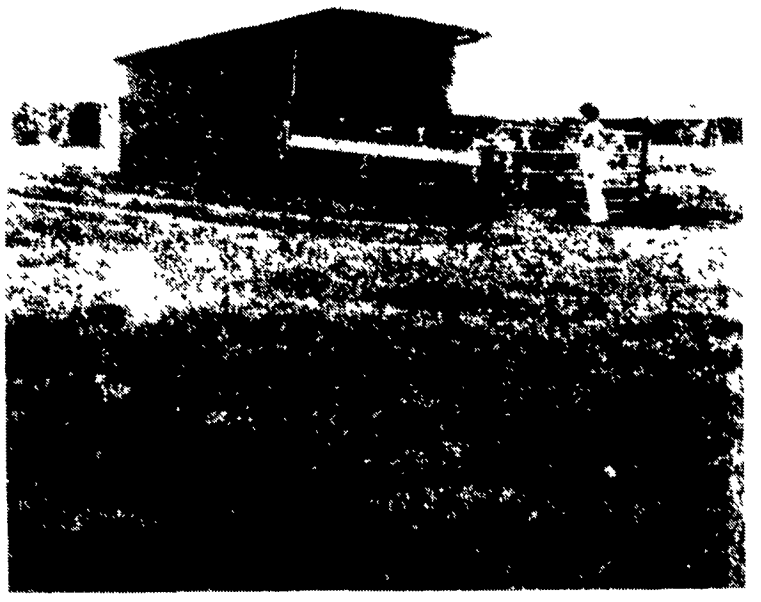
"I read everything I can get my hands on about college research and the latest technology. I talk to nutritionists, vets, farmers, contractors. . . . I'd probably go for an ag business degree if I were a young person starting out," he said.

He believes that farming is on the verge of making tremendous changes in operations. He foresees buying feed packages for individual cows and changes in the way manure is handled.

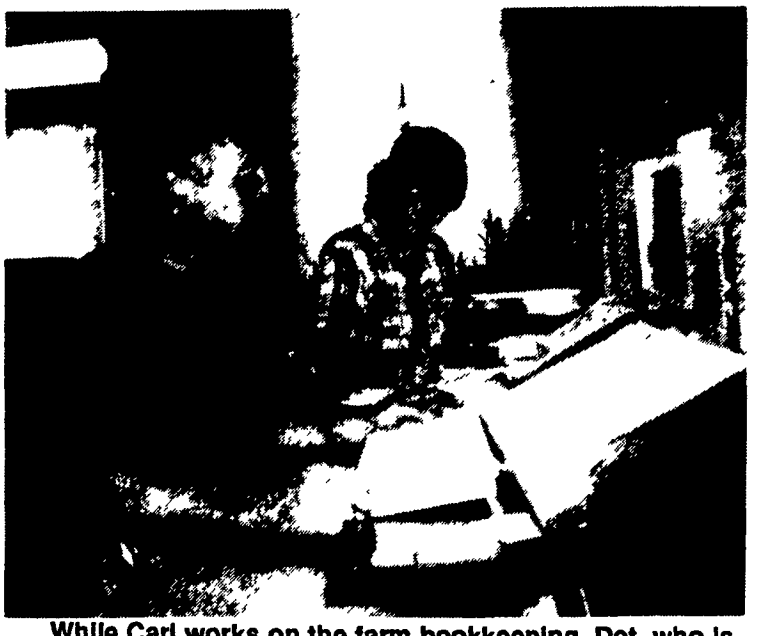
"Already we see ag companies merging to pool resources," he said.

(Turn to Page A36)

In partnership with his brother and wife, Carl and Dot Myer farm 700 acres, milk 280 cows, and are expanding the operation.



"You can't be too particular," Dot said of caring for the calves, which range between 40 and 90 head. Dot has a reputation as a stickler for cleanliness and detail.



While Carl works on the farm bookkeeping, Dot, who is coordinator for the county program of Ag in the Classroom, reviews the paper work.

BUILDING THE FUTURE

While government controls cause needless frustrations, Myer remains optimistic.

"I try not to get hung up on negative things, but look at things from a positive light," Myer said.

The Myers have a 1756 deed with the King of England's stamp on it for the property. The brick farmhouse was built in 1861. The Myers said that they fix the farmhouse up a small bit at a time because they don't believe in going in debt to fix the house. The farm comes first.

Dot enjoys gardening, landscaping, and raising flowers. She said, "My family had flower beds maintained from three generations. Whenever family members and friends came, we walked through the gardens and dug out perennials to exchange. We drank lemonade and played croquet and now we (society) is going back to that."

The Myer couple is active at the Lititz Grace Brethren Church and are Farm Bureau members.

"It isn't that we never take off, but farming requires a different way of life. Except on occasion we don't go away Saturday night like most people our age," Dot said.

"If I had someone more socially minded, it would be difficult to farm," Myer said, with a laugh.

Hoss's 6th Annual Fore FFA Golf Tournament July 20

DENVER (Lancaster Co.) — The 6th Annual Fore FFA Golf Tournament is scheduled Monday, July 20.

Immediately following the tournament, hors d'oeuvres will be served at the Foxchase pavilion. A dinner and awards ceremony will follow. Included is the special auction to also raise money for the foundation.

Cost for participating golfer is $85, which includes a contribution to the future of FFA, a complimentary mulligan, golfing, a bucket of driving range balls, lunch, the 1 p.m. shotgun scramble, refreshment carts on course, contests and prizes, a complimentary "Happy Hour," and the dinner and auction.

Blue Mold Alert Update

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Blue mold has been present in the Lancaster County tobacco crop for about four weeks. Up until this past week, it was confined mostly to tobacco beds and tobacco greenhouses. The past five or more days have provided weather conditions favorable for the spread of blue mold.

In order for blue mold to survive and thrive, it needs tobacco, tobacco leaves that are wet for prolonged periods, and cloudy weather.

Lancaster County's weather this past week has brought a rash of reports of blue mold in the field. As the number of reports increase, the number of potential sources of new infection has expanded greatly.

In addition, some of the fields which have blue mold have gone systemic. Once systemic, blue mold makes the tobacco plant unharvestable.

Blue mold can be controlled with frequent applications of approved fungicides. The only EPA-approved fungicides for tobacco are Dithane DF and Acrobat MZ.

Acrobat was recently granted an emergancy use label under section 18. For best results, these fungicides need to be applied before blue mold becomes established.

Spray schedules for fungicide applications range from 5 to 7 days depending on weather conditions. Both fungicides for blue mold control require complete coverage of the tobacco plant with the fungicide.

As the tobacco grows, sprayers will need to be modified to include drop nozzles, high pressures, and be capable of applying large volumes of water to adequately protect the crop.

Where trade names are used no discrimination is intended and no endorsement by cooperative extension is implied. Although every attempt is made to produce information that is complete, timely, and accurate, the pesticide user bears the responsibility of consulting the pesticide label and adhering to those directions.

provide agricultural economic development incentives and make sure rezoning requests adhere to their farmland protection goals.

Under the proposed approach, strategic farmland would be saved while growth is directed to land of less environmental and agricultural importance. Sprawl could be slowed, if not stopped.

I was born and raised on my family's farm in Baltimore County. Farming has been my life. And I want it to be my children's life and their children's too. But we are at a crossroads when it comes to the farmers and farmland of this state. Do we continue along our present path, knowing that in just a few generations, sprawl will have blanketed most of Maryland and a truly significant natural resource will have been lost? Or do we consider newer, more effective farmland protection and growth management strategies and techniques than those that have served us until now? Do we become better focused and targeted in our farmland protection efforts and adopt the tools and techniques of this model program?

For me the choice is clear. For me, saving farmland is the surest sprawl stopper of them all.

—Wayne McGinnis, a fourth-generation Baltimore County, Maryland, farmer, is board chairman of Chesapeake Farms for the Future and also chairman of the Maryland Agricultural Land Preservation Board.

AJCA News

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — The American Jersey Cattle Association and the National All-Jersey Inc., its affiliated marketing organization, are to hold their annual meetings June 26-27 in Burlington, Vermont.

A number of awards are to be presented by the AJCA during the annual meetings — a master breeder award, a distinguished service award, and nine young Jersey breeder awards.

Master Breeder

The Robert Stiles family of Clearbrook, Va., is to receive the Master Breeder Award, bestowed to a living AJCA member, family partnership or corporation who or that, in the opinion of the AJCA board of directors, has bred outstanding animals for many years and thereby has made a notable contribution to the advancement of the Jersey breed in the United States.

The Stiles family moved from Montgomery County, Md., to Virginia in 1967 and started Waverly Farm.

Roberts Stiles died in 1974 and his wife Hazel died in 1989.

Prior to Hazel's death, in 1982, Dr. Ray Murley and Dr. Joe Lineweaver developed a partnership with Waverly and began WF/L&M.

Today, three brothers, Ken, Mike and Paul Waverly and their families operate Waverly Farm. They are well-known among United States Jersey breeders.

On the Nov. 1997 active artificial insemination sire list, five bulls in the top 65 were bred at Waverly Farm, including the 12th ranked bull, WF/L&M Duncan Barber-ET, the highest ranking Highland Magic Duncan son.

Another Duncan son bred by Waverly Farm is listed 23rd, WF/L&M Duncan Booker-ET.

Twenty-fifth on the list is WF/L&M Lester Banjo-Et, one of the highest ranking Duncan Lester sons.

Other bulls bred at Waverly considered influential to the breed, but no longer active, include Top Brass Babes Lad-ET and W.F. Generator Justin, named several times as the premier sire of the All-American Show.

The Waverly herd consists of 242 cows, including 105 Excellents, 140 Very Goods and 18 Desirables (a Jersey ranking). The herd average appraisal score is 86.7 percent.

Since starting, Waverly Farm has bred or developed 351 Excellent cows, three at 96 percent, seven at 95, and more than 13 at 94 percent.

Their December 1997 rolling herd average was 15,711 pounds of milk, 784 pounds of fat, and 591 pounds of protein on 262 cows.

Currently 75 cows have actual records exceeding 20,000 pounds of milk or 1,000 pounds of fat.

Distinguished Service

Richard Clauss, of Hilmar, California is to receive the 1998 Distinguished Service Award from the AJCA during the annual meetings.

This award is annually bestowed to a member of the AJCA "who has rendered unselfish service for many years and, in doing so, made a notable contribution to the advancement of the Jersey breed in the United States.

Richard Clauss became a Jersey breeder in 1954 with a herd of 20 Jerseys. In participating in the leadership of the AJCA and in helping to build a large cheese production business that recognizes and reward component production, he has made several significant contributions to the Jersey breed industry.

He served on the boards of the AJCA and NAJ Inc. for a combined total of 17 years. He was president of NAJ from 1984 to 1994, and served as president of AJCA from 1994 to 1997.

During his tenure as president of NAJ, the nationwide acceptance of multiple component pricing increased. In fact, the first multiple component pricing was implemented in a federal milk marketing order during his watch.

In addition, under his leadership, equity fees increased from $140,000 per year to well over $200,000.

Also, as AJCA president, he was involved in the implementation of two major organizational programs — REAP and a business re-engineering plan.

A strong proponent of breed programs, his Clauss Dairy Farm herd was one of the first to be enrolled in the organization's genetic recovery program. In addition, he has been an active participant of young sire sampling.

In 1979, he and 14 other Jersey breeders founded Jerseyland Sires, a young sire proving group. Since starting, the group has proven more than 24 young sires each year.

One of the 11 founding members of Hilmar Cheese, he currently serves as chairman of the board of directors. The business has grown from processing 125,000 pounds of milk per day in 1986 to becoming the largest single site cheese plant in the world.

It currently processes about 4.5 million pounds of milk per day.

In addition the plant has consistantly paid its producers premiums above state required minimums.

Clauss has also been honored by other organizations. He was named World Dairy Expo's 1995 Dairyman of the Year, and California Polytechnic State University's 1995 Dairyman of the Year.

This year he is to be honored by Dairy Shrine as its 1998 guest of honor during its meeting in Madison, Wisconsin.

Young Jersey Breeder Awards

Nine young Jersey breeder awardees are to be recongized during the annual meetings.

The breeder awards are bestowed annually to as many AJCA members who, in the opinion of the board of directors, deserve recognition.

Deborah Osborn, of Keymar, Maryland, is to be recognized as a recipient of a 1998 young Jersey breeder award.

Osborn works in partnership with her parents, James and Sharon Osborn, and together they own and operate Queen-Acres Farm.

Originally the farm had a Holstein herd, but Deborah influenced the switch to Jerseys. Currently they milk 150 and raise about 200 replacements.

She said her long term goals are to achieve a herd with high production and functional type.

Through the third quarter of 1997, she has worked with and developed 27 cows with 33 Hall of Fame records, and three cows named to the Jersey national class leader list. One of those on the list is Queen-Acres Boomer Celeste, the United States milk production record holder. Among herd rankings by size, the Osborn herd is nationally ranked in the top 10 for milk, fat and protein for 1996 and 1997.

Deborah has served as chairperson of the Maryland Jersey Cattle Club Production Committee, and encouraged the club to host a sale to boost the operating budget and promote interest in Jerseys as youth project animals.

Frank Easter of Laurens, South Carolina, also is to receive a young Jersey breeder award.

Easter has worked in partnership with his family since they moved their Eastglen Jersey herd from Vermont in 1978. He is responsible for milking, equipment maintenance, herd health, heat detection, breeding, matings, keeping the herd records on the computer, merchandising cattle, and taking care of the show string.

The Eastglen Farm annually supports the Dixie Invitational Sale, the South Carolina 4-H Dairy Heifer Project sale, and the All American sale.

International export has been very important in their marketing efforts. During last year's Brazil-American Jersey Breeders' Promotional Sale, their consignment was the top-selling open yearling of the sale.

Easter is always looking to improve their herd through the purchase of superior animals. He represents the farm at many local and national sales and is pleased with the type and production of cattle they have been able to purchase.

In addition to coordinating Eastglen's marketing plan, Easter spends a great deal of his time in the showring. Each year he travels to several local and regional shows, as well as the All American. This year marked the 20th year Eastglen exhibited Jerseys at the South Carolina State Fair.

Brian Spahr, of Findlay, Ohio, is to receive a young breeder award. He is the fifth generation of his family to milk Jerseys in Findlay. He and his wife Laurie has a young daughter Tristen.

In 1994, Spahr expanded the milking herd from 40 to more than 270. In doing so, he added a 200-freestall barn, a double-eight milking parlor, bunker silos, and a manure storage system. The herd's rolling average milk production has grown more than 2,500 pounds per cow since then.

In addition to the dairy expansion, Spahr has incorporated several soil and water conservation practices on the farm. In 1996, Spahr Jersey Farm was selected as the finalist from northwest Ohio in a conservation farm family award program. In 1995, the farm was named Hancock County Soil and Water Cooperator of the Year.

Spahr has been active with the Ohio Jersey Breeder's Association, currently serving as District II president, chairman of the All American Sale Committee, and as a member of several of it milk and promotion committees, he has served as the 1990 state sale co-chairman, and on the All American Open Show Committee.

Scott and Kristin Carson of New Lebanon, New York, is to receive a young Jersey breeder award. The couple have been involved with dairy cattle their entire lives. The have a young daughter, Kayla.

After graduating from Virginia Tech in Blacksburg, Virginia, the couple moved to Vermont to manage the family farm with Scott's parents. In 1992, they purchased 51 registered Jerseys and moved to New York.

In 1993, they formed a partnership with Kristin's parents, larry and Barbara Benson, owners of Shaker View Jerseys in New Lebanon. The move provided a more efficient management system, superior feed and land resources, and the opportunity to rapidly improve herd performance.

In January 1997, they purchased the last 95 head of the Shaker View Jersey herd.

Their 1997 DHIR rolling herd average was 18,816 pounds milk, 869 pounds of fat, and 698 pounds of protein on 132 cows. That ranks eighth for protein and fat in the United States among AJCA herds with 80 to 149 milking head. They also have bred 12 Hall of Fame cows.

The Carsons strive for continuous improvement and development with a goal of seeking a total performance Jersey herd. Their goal is for Celestial Jerseys to be known worldwide for excellence.

Russell Isley, of Burlington, North Carolina, is to receive a young Jersey breeder award. Russell and his family own Bellemont Acres. Their 46-cow herd had a December 1997 rolling herd average of 14,804 pounds of milk, 686 pounds of fat, and 535 pounds of protein.

In his youth, as a junior breeder, he was active in showing and judging Jerseys. He won the 1980 Jersey youth production contest and placed fourth in the Jersey youth achievement contest. He was the top scoring individual at the 1981 Pennsylvania All-American judging contest.

Known as "Rusty" to friends and family, he has been a 4-H advisor for 16 years and frequently loans out some of his Jerseys to 4-Hers to show at the state fair.

A 15-year member of the North Carolina Jersey Association board of directors, aand a four-year member of the Alamance County Dairy Herd Improvement Association, in 1993 he served on the JJCA/NAJ annual meeting Planning Committee.

In addition he has served as president and vice president of the North Carolina Purebred Dairy Cattle Association and chairman of its youth fund-raising committee.

He and his wife Sharon have three children, Jordon, Kayla, and Blake.

Harvey and Jackie Menn, of Norwalk, Wisconsin, are to receive a young Jersey breeder award. They have a 47-head milking string with a rolling herd average of 14,006 pounds of milk, 660 pounds of fat and 660 pounds of protein. The herd has an average appraisal score of 81 percent.

The Menns took over his parents' farm in 1988. The first thing the couple did was to put the grade cows through the association's genetic recovery program.

Using the recovery program was one of many changes implemented by the couple. Over the past 10 years, they have added the use of a total mixed ration, a ventilation system, heifer barn, cow mattresses and tie stalls.

Harvey currently holds directorships with the Monroe County DHIA and the Monroe County Farm Bureau Association. Jackie has served as secretary/treasurer of the Parish 4 Jersey Breeders since 1989. They were the winners of the Monroe County Farm Bureau young farmer award, and were in the top ten for the state award.

They have three young children, Taylor, Jenna and Ryan.

Kevin and Annette Thomas of Tillamook, Oregon are to receive the young Jersey breeder award.

The Thomases have been involved with the dairy industry since Kevin graduated from the dairy herd management program at Utah State University. After renting a farm in California, they purchased a farm and moved to Oregon in 1994.

Silver Mist Farm has 90 acres with 86 in pasture. In the spring and summer the Thomases graze their cattle and are able to make grass silage. In the winter the cows are fed a TMR with corn silage, grain and cottonseed.

Through state sales, the Western National Sale, and the Pride of the West Sales, the Thomases have been able to build a herd with excellent genetics. Their Sil-Mist Berretta Buttons recently scored 92 percent and is currently eighth on the PTI list. Buttons is a daughter of Marv Du Malcolm Buttons, a cow they purchased at the 1992 Western Sale.

The couple have six children, Devin, Kashan, David, Michol, and Lukas.

Jill Thomas Hewitt of Tigard, Oregon, is to receive a young Jersey breeder award. She has been involved with Jersey cattle since 1977, when she purchased her first Jersey, Thomas Milestone Carom Lassie, at the Washington County Youth Sale. That animal became the foundation for her herd.

She spends much of her summer preparing the show string and attending several county, state and regional fairs, including the Western National Show. She showed the reserve grand champion there in 1997, Thomas Opportunity Abby.

In addition, she serves as liason between the Oregon State Fair board and Jersey exhibitors. In 1996, she successfully convinced the fair board to feature the Jesery breed at this year's state fair.

Involved with the Washington County Youth Sale, she serves as president of the Oregon Jersey Cattle Club and the Western Jersey Breeders Association. For four years she also has served as coach for the state 4-H dairy judging team.

The family has plans to relocate this year. After the move, Hewitt said she plans to hire a nutritionist and adopt a TMR in pursuit of a rolling herd average of 16,500 pounds milk.

C.A. and Kirstin Russell of Hilmar, California, are to receive a young Jersey breeder award.

GRAIN PROCESSING FOR CATTLE FEEDERS

A very important decision for cattle feeders is the choice of method for the processing or preparation of grains common to feedlot rations. Many cattlemen are under the impression that grinding, rolling, cooking, etc., all improve the digestibility and feeding value of grains. This is not always true, because the differences in size of kernel, seedcoat, fiber content, and palatability of each grain must be considered.

Corn is produced in greater quantity than any other grain and is also preferred by most feeders. Compared with other grains, corn is superior in available energy, higher in total digestible nutrients, is a source of vitamin A, is more palatable, and requires less processing. A commonly held opinion among cattlemen is that the reduction of particle size by grinding and rolling improves the digestibility of shelled whole corn.

However, in finishing ration containing at least 80 percent corn, feeding trials have shown no difference as to whether the corn was cracked, finely ground, rolled, or whole.

When whole corn is fed a few grains of corn can be easily seen in manure because of the relatively large size. However, close examination of droppings from cattle fed finely ground corn reveals the same amount of undigested grain. In fact, when no roughage is fed, whole corn provides superior performance over ground or rolled since whole corn provides its own "roughage factor" thereby avoiding the rumenitis and liver abscesses associated with high concentrate diets.

Steam rolling or flaking does improve the utilization of corn by 5 percent to 10 percent in most finishing diets. However, the capital investment, energy cost, equipment maintenance and labor associated with steam flaking dictate its use in larger operations where the equipment can be used to capacity.

Barley has a high fiber hull and contains less available energy than corn, but is an excellent feed for cattle. Both grinding and rolling improve the digestibility of barley, while steam flaking further improves utilization.

Oats have a fibrous hull like barley, but the hull is a bit softer and cattle utilize whole oats better than whole barley. Either grinding or rolling can improve digestibility. Although a very palatable and excellent feed for cattle, good quality oats are almost always too expensive to compete with corn.

Regardless of the grain in question, the choice of a processing method must be based on total cost of capital, depreciation, energy, maintenance and labor.

Real All About Animal Handling

Doing its part to improve meat quality, the Livestock Conservation Institute has developed four animal-handling pamphlets. And at $1 a copy, they would make great handouts for your next family or employee meeting — or even a refresher fo ryou.

The pamphletes are:

- Handling Piegs: This contains information on basic hog behavior during handling and transport. It also addresses crowd-pen and chute design elements.
- Livestock Handling Guide: Like the previous pamphlet, this one helps you understand animal behavior and offers facility and loading-chute design tips. It also provides information to help you prevent bruises and other animal injuries.
- Livestock Trucking Guide: The best ways to transport hogs is the topic in this pamphlet. Space recommendations, the livestock-safety index, the Ames wind-chill indexes and general trucking tips are included.
- Proper Handling Techniques for Nonambulatory Animals: This pamphlet is designed to respond to the needs of nonambulatory animals. It includes preventative measures, proper euthanasia technique for a variety of animals, proper moving techniques and facility design recommendations.

herd of Jerseys from Water and Joan Brown, and then formed a partnership with Kirsten's parents, Dick and Sharon Clauss, to create Yosemite Jerseys Dairy.

The Yosemite herd has 1,300 milking cows with a rolling herd average of 17,973 pounds milk, 843 pounds fat and 728 pounds protein. Since the formation of Yosemite, C.A. has focussed on managing the herd, as well as the heifer faising operation at Clauss Dairy Farm, and at the Sunwest Jersey Dairy.

C.A. and Kirsten are both involved in community and dairy related activities. C.A. has served on the Central Valley Breeders board of directors and is the current vice president of the California Jersey Cattle Association and has served on the Hilmar Fire Department since 1989. Kirsten has served as co-chair of the Merced County Heifer Program and on the Emanual Medical Center Board.

My husband and I live on Onyx Cave Road for 31 years. We built a house on a piece of land off the farm my husband Willard was born and raised on.

We have three sons, Rodney, Jeffrey, and Kirk, two grandsons, and one graddaughter. Willard is retired from construction and works part-time for Perry Township. I work at the Kwik Shoppe Drive-In in Shoemakersville, where I have been working for 24 years, and also as a demonstrator for Candle-Land Parties out of Myerstown for eight years.

I love reading Lancaster Farming and cutting out the recipes. My husband renewed his subscription to your newspaper and received a free hat. He has a big hat collection.

"C'mere!"

"C'mere, look at this!"

The voice of our son-in-law, standing outside the opposite end of the calf nursery, had an excited urgency. Hustling to the opposite end of the little barn, I noticed his gaze fastened on something in the distance. My eyes followed the direction in which his were followed the directions in which his were focused, but the object of attentions wasn't immediately obvious.

"Is that the bear?'

Then I saw the small, trotting black body, on the north-facing slope of the ridge beyond the meadow pasture. The black animal was headed downhill,crossing from one to the corn fields onto the filed road which slices upwards at an angle across the hillside of contoured strips of hay, corn, and soybeans.

I'll get the glasses, "I said, turning to run to the house. And nearly smashed into our daughter, baby Caleb strapped on her back in a carrier, and field glasses already in her hands.

Bears have been big news around here after at least one or two have begun moving through southern York County. Apparently they've begun exploring territory beyond northern Maryland, where bear-sightings have been reported for the past few years. My initial reaction to the bear tales in our neighborhood were that someone had jumped to some erroneous conclusions over something else, probably a dog traveling through.

Except that the reports were being made by too many people with too much experience about wildlife. Then, friends related seeing photos of the visiting backyard bears. And, the bear(s) reported whereabouts had put it very close to the farm, calculating the eyewitness locations where the bruin had been spotted. To get from this place to that place, if it was the same bear, the errant animals would have had to pass just on the opposite side of the interstate highway from us.

Having ever only seen one real wild bear in my life and that near the hunting camp my fascination with the visitor was growing. And, what could possibly induce a bear to be roaming around our fairly-heavily populated part of York County, taking its chances with lots of people and an ever-growing horde of cars on the numerous roads criss-crossing the area?

Garbage. That's what.

Or, just bear-food in general, garbage being only one handy possibility for finding goodies around this peopled part of the country. There are also lots of fresh berries around the woods and fence rows right now, enough to keep a hungry bear busy nibbling for at least of couple of more weeks. To say nothing of us bird and squirrel fans who keep feeders stuffed with tasty seeds.

Folks who live in more-rural parts of the state, plagued with bears ripping up garbage bags, destroying feeders, and flattening large sections of cornfields, probably will get a chuckle out of us relative urbanites and the excitement stirred by the appearance of a bear. Most of us who live in heavily-populated areas see our bears in zoos, on videos, movies, and the Discovery Channel of cable Lest we forget, bears passing through here are still wild animals, and not dancing teddy-cartoons out of a Disney film.

It brings to mind the experience of friends who began feeding a bear at their mountain hunting cabin, encouraging the bruin's visits to their retreat. Then came the morning when they were frying bacon for breakfast near a screened kitchen window. The bear attempted to join them, trashing the window screen in the process.

Frankly, I never thought I'd be writing about a bear in the backyard.

And actually I'm not. A quick glance in the binoculars revealed a long, wagging tail on the black blob. Just a neighborhood black labrador retriever, inhaling the enticing fragrance of goundogs in the field.

Our bear fact turned out to be a false alarm.

Wherever that northbound bear is headed, we wish it good luck and a reminder to look both ways before crossing highways.

Death, Dying Remain Difficult Topics

UNIVERSITIY PARK (Centre Co.) — Death and dying can still be taboo subjects, even for rehabilitation counselors in hospitals, nursing homes, and prisons who must accept the death of clients as an occupational fact of life.

"Most counselors do not come into the field to work with people who are dying, nor are they prepared to face the reality of client death," says Dr. Brandon B. Hunt, assistant professor of counselor education, counseling psychology and rehabilitation services at Penn State.

"Working with clients with severe disabilities increases the odds that rehabilitation workers will experience the death of a client," Hunt notes. "Moreover, the longer counselors work in the field, the greater the odds that they will experience client death. Unfortunately, the training of rehabilitation counselors to deal with such losses is minimal at best."

Hunt, a faculty member in Penn State's College of Education, and Dr. David A. Rosenthal, assistant professor in the Department of Rehabilitation Counseling at the University of Wisconsin-Stout, are co-authors of the paper, "Rehabilitation Counselors-in-Training: A Study of Levels of Death Anxiety and Perceptions About Client Death," which appeared in a recent issue of the journal Rehabilitation Education.

The researchers surveyed 160 rehabilitation counselor-in-training students about client death. Results revealed that 31 percent of the students would prefer not to work with dying clients, 83 percent thought death and dying training was needed for rehabilitation counselors and 34 percent had experienced the death of between 1 and 20 clients.

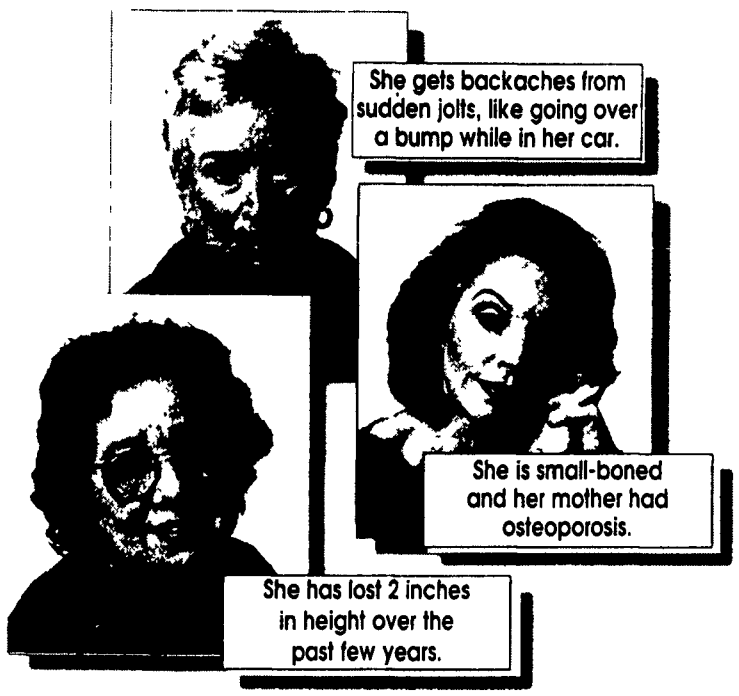
"Of the students we surveyed, only 36 had graduate courses, workshops, hospice training and on-the-job training that deal with death, dying and bereavement issues," Hunt says. "While they may not constitute separate courses themselves, grief and loss issues can be incorporated into a variety of existing courses."

For instance, topics such as euthanasia, a right to hospice and other services, and rational suicide (the deliberate decision to end life while still functioning) can be addressed in a course on legal and ethical issues in the field of rehabilitation. Grief and loss, as well as adjustment to a terminal or life-threatening illness or disability, can be covered in a course focusing on the medical and psychosocial aspects of counseling the disabled or terminally ill.

"Faculty and students in counseling programs should be encouraged to talk about their own experiences with client death, as well as strategies that helped them adjust to the loss," Hunt says. "This can help all counselors develop their own strategies for coping with client death, including talking to colleagues, and supervisors, taking time to grieve for the clients, reducing one's caseload for a period of time if needed and going to counseling themselves if necessary."

"Results from this and other research document that the majority of rehabilitation counselors will experience the death of a client during their careers," she notes. "Therefore, it is important to provide students with opportunities to explore their thoughts and feelings about their own death and loss experiences before they work with clients who are dying or people who are grieving."

Guess which of these women has osteoporosis?



She gets backaches from sudden jolts, like going over a bump while in her car.
She is small-boned and her mother had osteoporosis.
She has lost 2 inches in height over the past few years.

If you answered "all three," you are correct. If you have experienced any of these symptoms or have a similar family history, you could have osteoporosis, too.

There's good news. We're doing a study in which everyone will receive Fosamax, calcium and Vitamin D for 2 years, free of charge You'll also receive a free screening test for osteoporosis

The Nature of Fathering.

"You really don't understand human nature unless you know why a child on a merry-go-round will wave at his parents every time around and why his parents will always wave back." Last night I saw that William D. Tammer's quote played out before my eyes in my own family.

My husband was busily mowing the lawn when he heard out 15-month -old daughter pounding on the window. As soon as he glanced up, her face lit up, and she started waving madly at him. He returned the wave and motioned in their own private sign language, "I love you." Then he turned and headed back down the yard away from her.

She stayed glued to the window. As soon as he made the next turn, she began the routine again, waving madly and waiting anxiously for his smile and wave in response. This continued until he moved out of her view. Each time she waved and longed for his attention. Each time he returned the gesture and gave a special giggle or tease back. This very personal exchange reminded me of the incredible importance a father plays in a child's life a role that fathers fill uniquely.

Of course, some women don't like to hear that, but men, and fathers in particular, do interact with children differently than women. One area where men and women differ is that men tend to interact in a more playful, physical way. Some adults may worry that this rough play will encourage behavior that becomes violent. But extensive research and observations do not support that concern.

In fact, the research says that "play aggression" is different that "real aggression," and the participants know that. Play aggression is characterized by open palms, smiles, relaxed muscles and body position with storytelling interspersed in the play. Child development experts now support children having lots of times for tough and tumble play. Interesting, this physical rough-housing actually improves a child's social skills. Children who have experienced this tend to have more friends, be better readers, have higher language skills, and have greater levels of creativity.

Ironically, children who were not exposed to regular rough and tumble play tended to lack the social skills to interact with friends without getting angry. Although we don't understand the entire process, experts believe that the social skills develop as children and dads read each others' cues and adjust when play becomes "too rough" or when the child is "no longer having fun.: It develops in children an intuitive "know when to say when" sort of judgment.

Boys who grow up without a positive male role model often develop a "protest" or "Hypermasculine" personality trying desperately to compensate for the lack of a father.

Although women can interact with their kids in this rougher, more playful way, men come by it naturally! And the rough and tumble play is important for both sons and daughters. When it's sanctioned, girls actually welcome the chance to wrestle or play tug-of-war or be in a water balloon battle.

In addition to providing lots of rough and tumble play, dads also encourage risk-taking. They provide, for both their sons and their daughters, the first look at how a man behaves. Last Sunday, we celebrated fathers. In the months ahead, I encourage fathers to renew their commitment to their children by investing quantities of time with them (for rough and tumble play, for conversation, for just being together). I encourage moms to recognize the wonderful nature of men and appreciate the unique needs that they meet in children's lives.

And whoever you are, when you're watching a child on the merry-go-round, always wave back.

Wayne County To Hold Pilot Program For Kids

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Wayne County 4-H Program announced a new summer day camp for youngsters. The pilot program will debut on Monday, July 6-10, at the Lakeside Elementary School in Honesdale. The half-day program running from 9 am to 12 noon is designed to provide youngsters with a new experience and a chance for discovery.

Five of the newest hands-on 4-H projects are being offered for 8-12 year olds. Adult volunteers, assisted by 4-H teens, will be delivering the programs to the campers in both a classroom situation and an outdoor arena.

• "Catch the bug" will introduce youngsters to the world of insects. Campers will not only collect and learn to identify insects, but they will also be making their own equipment used to collect insects. This project will help youth develop pride in their work as they create a collection to be exhibited at the Wayne County Fair.

• In "At Your Disposal," campers will learn what garbage is and what to do with it. They will create their own mini-landfill, as they learn the importance of recycling, composting and efficient garbage disposal, along with learning to craft recyclables from trash to treasures.

• "Rub Elbows with Your Ancestors" is designed to introduce youngsters to the local heritage of Honesdale. They will learn the historical significance of the railroad from a local viewpoint and take the famous "Walking Tour" of Honesdale Also, campers will explore the different facets of life by studying tombstones and will create their own unique tombstone by rubbing to display at the fair.

• For the scientist in the family who has wondered how a rocket works, the project "Rocketry" project is the one to pick. In this project campers will explore the world of aviation when they build and customize their own rocket, and ultimately launch their spacecraft.

• Discover the jungle in your own backyard in "Trees+Me =Forestry." Campers will become familiar with the trees in Pennsylvania.

As a bonus, each camper will also participate in the "Food and Fitness for Fun" project with Penn State Nutrition Educator, Evie Vitali. Nutritional snacks and supplies are included in the project fees.

Pre-registration is required. Limited space is available in these projects. Register by calling the Wayne County Extension Office at 717-253-5970 ext. 239.

Amanda Sollenberger Reigns In Blair County

CURRYVILLE (Blair Co.) — Seventeen-year-old Amanda Sollenberger, daughter of Gerald and Jean Sollenberger of Curryville, was crowned at the 1998-99 Blair County Dairy Princess recently at the Logan Valley Mall, Altoona. Sollenberger will be assisted in her reign by alternate Heather Brennamen, 16-year-old daughter of Kenneth and Elizabeth Brennamen of Williamsburg.

The pageant was held on the center stage of the Logan Valley Mall in front of a crowd of 175 people. State Representative Jerry Stern was the master of ceremonies for the evening. Each contestant presented an original skit promoting milk and dairy products to the crowd. Before the pageant began the contestants each had an interview with the three judges.

Amanda Sollenberger's presentation was a delightful version of the "Tooth Fairy" warning against poor nutrition and presenting the benefits of milk and dairy products to children's teeth as well as their overall health. Amanda will be a senior at Central High School in the fall where she is enrolled in the English honors classes, agriculture and the college preparatory track. She is active in the Drama Club and Drama Troupe, public speaking, track and Cross Country, yearbook sports editor and the Science Club. Outside of school she is active in her church, is activities leader of the Morrisons Cove 4-H Dairy Club and enjoys reading, writing, roller blading and music. Amanda's parents own Sollenberger Farms in partnership with her uncle. The farm milks 160 head of Holsteins and farms 350 acres in the heat of Morrisons Cove.

Heather Brennamen portrayed a dairy princess with her cow to tell school aged children the story of milk from the cow to the dinner table. Heather will be a sophomore at Williamsburg High School in the fall. She is active in her 4-H Horse Club and enjoys being outdoors and working with animals. Heather's parents are in partnership with her uncle and aunt as owners of Brennamen Brothers Farm. The farm milks 60 Holsteins and farms 200 acres in Williamsburg.

Amanda Sollenberger reigns as the Blair County Dairy Princess.

Assisting Amanda and Heather throughout the year will be three-dairy-maids. They are Diana Bigelow, 14-year-old daughter of Richard and Cindy Bigelow of Williamsburg. Lisa Hamming, 13-year-old daughter of Peter and Linda Hamming of Martinsburg and Angela Sollenberger, 15-year-old daughter of Gerald and Jean Sollenberger of Curryville.

Tornadoes Send Shock Waves In Somerset Ag Community

Velma "Bunny" Miller is backdropped by the foundation where her house once stood and the area where she and the oak table were flung by a recent tornado. With her are Hooch a big shepherd dog and Tawny, a Pekingese.

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SOMERSET – A firm but gentle bumping at her thigh finally awakened Velma "Bunny" Miller from her semi-conscious state

Becoming cognizant of her darkened surroundings, the 50-year-old woman realized she was lying on the ground, caught under the treasured oak dining room table that she had purchased two years earlier.

"It's just been in the last five years I was beginning to get some of the things I've always wanted," said the mother of five grown sons, some days later.

Hooch, the eight-year old Shepherd farm dog was butting her leg with his nose, as if his sharp senses detected this was a rescue mission.

Bunny couldn't move. She was sure her hip was broken.

Wayne E. Miller, not knowing what happened to his wife, was frantic.

There had only been time to shout "Tornado!" when he raced into the house from his tractor, snatched up Tawny, the Pekingese dog, and fled to the basement He trusted that Bunny and Hooch were right behind him.

Hooch was descending the stairs when they instantly collapsed into the cellar. Bunny never made it The vortex sucked her and the table through the walls at approximately 9:05 to 9:10 p m on Sunday, May 31, and dropped them some 75 feet away from the shambles of their former home

The three-story house above Wayne caved into the basement. He received minor cuts, but otherwise, was not seriously injured.

Lightening flashed again and again. Aware that around him, everything was flat—house, barn, sheds, trees— Wayne walked in different directions, calling Bunny's name.

She kept answering but realized that Wayne's partial hearing loss coupled with the wind found him going in every place but the right one.

Eventually, he heeded her suggestion to look for the faithful Shepherd still holding his post at her side.

The power was out. Telephone service was down.

Driven by the will to get help for his injured spouse, Wayne seemed oblivious to the surrounding carnage. He made the barefoot woman walk through the field to the tractor, virtually, the only vehicle that hadn't perished in the shocking onslaught.

Gray paint that had exploded from five gallons stored in the basement, in the terrorizing seconds of touch down plastered the man, the woman, and the beautiful silky coat of the Pekingese.

At the end of the Red Dog Road, Greenville Township, a motorist, had a cellular telephone in his pickup truck and summoned an ambulance. Difficulties were encountered from fallen trees, which volunteers were trying to remove by flashlight with chain saws, to reopen the impassable roadway to traffic.

The massive vortex had virtually wiped out whole blocks of private dwellings and businesses in the hart of Salisbury, a town of many stately, well-kept Victorian houses, situated about six miles to the west.

It had been vicious in both Greenville and Elk LIck Townships and the community of Pocahontas, leaving widespread destruction and suspending time for those who found themselves unexpectedly home less.

About two hours later, Bunny was en route to a local hospital where deep bruises, but no broken bones, kept her a patient for three days Removing the paint from her skin was the most unusual part of her treatment.

Several animals perished and others were sold as cull cows. The majority of their dairy herd, however, survived and, for two and a half weeks, were milked somewhere else.

Then another extremely difficult day arrived when one of the hardest decisions they ever have faced was carried out selling the 50 dairy cows, which demanded too much of their time and attention.

"We got rid of the dairy cattle in order to spend more time here to rebuild," Bunny said, explaining that next fall they plan to restart the dairy operation when the pregnant heifers give birth in September.

"The heifers will come fresh and we can start up again, ' said the recovering, but upbeat, farm wife.

Less than 48 hours after the Sunday tornado, on Tuesday evening, a few miles north-northwest of Salisbury, Perry Millard was cautiously eyeing the clouds moving around the sky above Mount Davis. He and three sons were finishing the barn work on the Pleasanthill School Road farm that the family rents between St. Paul and Summit Mills.

If he wanted, Millard could drive to the top of Mt. Davis, Pennsylvania's highest point above sea level, in mere minutes, to enjoy its natural splendor and wildlife. It's very visible, as well, to his farming neighbors.

The man's dairy herd was composed of about 95 milking cows, many of them registered Holsteins, Jerseys, and Brown Swiss.

"As long as the wind doesn't shift, ' he commented to someone in the family, "we'll be okay."

But things changed in a hurry. Millard watched as the swirling vapors began their fascinating formation. "It was like they were on a string," he observed. "The clouds were gathering and being sucked in."

In the basement the family stayed until the funnel passed over a nearby valley about 7:30. The power went off and Millard started the generator to finish the barn work. It also provided lights for the house basement.

His wife, Mayme, hearing the local radio station's continue d warning to seek shelter another tornado was being traced in virtually the same path as its Sunday evening predecessor lost no time in relaying the message to her husband.

" I took the pickup and moved it to the field. I went to the basement and was there about one minute and it hit," Millard said.

The noise that everybody who heard it described as sounding like a freight train, was muffled for the Millards because the basement walls were so heavily insulated.

"All we got was a whistle, buy you could hear stuff hitting the house. It lasted five or six seconds."

"When I went out the door, you could see it was a mess," Millard said. Lines on poles were sparking and the heavy, 80-foot stave silo had fallen across the barn.

"The cows were at the feed bins and the silo came in over them. You could hear the cows," he said. "You knew you needed help to get the cows out.'

Lines and trees, trees and lines, everywhere. When the fire department volunteers arrived, they worked 45 minutes to open

Community Pulls Together For Tornado Cleanup

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SALISBURY (Somerset Co.) — The sun dawned brilliantly on Monday, June 1, as Eileen Yoder made her way to the Salisbury Elementary School that sits beyond the beautiful lawns surrounding Claradale's homey farmhouse. The Elk Lick Township farmstead is located slightly southwest of the borough.

With Krista, 16, and Sheila, 14, Eileen and her teen-aged daughters, like everyone realized that, unlikely as it had seemed, a great tornado, around 9 o'clock the previous evening had indeed savaged their lovely hometown. It also cut electricity, communications, and messed up water systems.

To offer whatever aid was most helpful was their intention.

On the north side of town coming seven miles from Meyersdale was a Salisbury-Elk Lick elementary teacher and her children. Bonnie Foxwell, Natalie, 15, and Tim, 12, were of the same mindset as the Yoders. More than anything they wanted to be of use.

Authorities wouldn't permit the Foxwells to enter town. Only emergency personnel were entering its dangerous environs

Dangling lines and utility poles hung frighteningly over the streets. Building materials littered the ground. Scores of uprooted trees hid weakened structures that stood ready to collapse. Vehicles were crushed into odd shapes. Glass, nails, twisted metal, loose bricks and wood were thrown everywhere.

One person had died, others were injured, and searchers went house to house looking for any unaccounted persons.

Forty seconds was all it took for the shocking twister to reorder the lives of hundreds. It proceeded to devastate and rip up surrounding homes and farms in Elk Lick and Greenville Townships before fizzling out.

Foxwell had to bide her time

Yoder, whose prior acquaintance with the educator was casual, arrived at the school cafeteria around 10:30 a.m

(Turn to Page B7)

Community Pulls Together

Nobody had taken full charge of the chaotic scene.

Donations of food were pouring in, but she wondered, without electricity, water or refrigeration, how to begin.

Yoder worked by her wits. Her obvious capabilities soon found others gravitating to her for guidance.

By 7:30 p.m. her perseverance had paid off and Foxwell also reached the site. She pitched her lot with that of Yoder.

Down the hall at Red Cross headquarters the victims' immediate needs of food, shelter, medical and family services were being met.

Unlike the high school which took a severe hit on its roof, the primary school sustained no damage. An old grand-stand that the Work Progress Administration had built in 1938 lay in pieces near the twisted fence around the athletic field. Some thought there was no other like it left in the state of Pennsylvania.

"We had to slice meat for sandwiches and there were no condiments and no lights except the emergency lights in the elementary school. It was a mess," reported Yoder.

"We were farming dirty dishes out to people in their homes because there was no water," reported Foxwell. "We couldn't see in the (cafeteria) kitchen at night," she said.

Besides that, with the help of their kids, the bleary-eyed women attempted to mop the large floor before leaving the scene late on Monday.

Then, because it posed a health risk the women were told by the Red Cross that privately prepared food donations were not to be accepted.

"We did the best we could with what we had," aid Foxwell with pride.

"We had not been trained in public food safety and food temperatures," Yoder, whose home is spanking clean, said.

With passing hours, donated generators and refrigerated trucks arrived. Literally tons of ice disappeared with unbelievable speed, along with bottled water.

The two unsuspecting moms accepted their lot as food co-managers and directed the workers, one being the reliable Thelma Lanteigne from Grantsville, Md.

"It was kind of like we read each other's mind," they observed about how well they worked together.

Yoder's church, however, agreed to furnish one meal each day since 700-1,000 meals were always needed.

And then came Tuesday with its muggy warmth and ominous tinges across the sky.

Weather forecasters warned that conditions were ideal for tornadoes to develop that evening in Somerset County.

As the day lengthened, event tension increased. The citizenry, after experiencing the first devastating blow, were taking the watch very seriously, although the grappled over the idea that history, could, so soon, be repeated.

Tornado Cleanup

Suddenly, the voices of doom were sounding warnings. A tornado was spotted in western Somerset county near the Westmoreland County border. Rapidly, it progressed towards southern Somerset County, skimming other communities as it moved. People raced to various shelters. Then, in full view it burst over Mount Davis . . .

Its fury upon contact exceeded, 48 hours earlier, the fierceness of its awful predecessor.

The town was barely spared as it proceeded from northwest to southeast of the town's borders, the lethal suction of its centrifugal winds tossing animals, houses, barns, trees like toothpicks

There were a total of 14 tornados in the tri-state area that night and Frostburg, Md., had tremendous losses.

The roadway most traveled — Route 219 — was closed by fallen trees. Power lines were spun out of the area.

State transportation crews and volunteer firemen cleared medical facility was at stake and trained crews had virtually, no approach open to their utility poles.

About 200 individuals were refuged in the school's multipurpose room.

"The fear was felt, even in the darkness," recalled Yoder.

Clyde Stein, the school district maintenance supervisor, and his staff endured the stressful scenario. Earlier that day they had helped the experts to run temporary telephone lines for the disaster teams.

"Wednesday and Thursday were very stressful," Stein reported. "I had to make decisions about generators."

Then, sleeping arrangements for members of the National Guard, deployed after Governor Tom Ridge on Wednesday inspected and declared it a disaster area, had to be made by Stein. The military forces would expedite demolition of unsafe structures and the removal of rubbish and debris.

"We ran 24-hour shifts," said Stein, recapping the odd schedules that his crew including Sandy Bodes, worked.

Bodes, after Sunday was sleeping some three hours a night. "It went until Thursday before I got eight hours of sleep," he reported. That's when electricity was restored.

Meanwhile, scores of churches combined resources to feed workers in outlying districts around Salisbury.

Several ladies wrote menus and figured the mathematics for copious amounts of food. Contact person from participating congregations asked people in their own church to sign up for requested dishes on specific days.

Drivers were enlisted to deliver food and supplies.

Ideally situated halfway between Salisbury and St. Paul, the Mountain View Christian Fellowship was chosen as the food service headquarters Unplanned, the Mennonite Disaster Service was also there

MDS relayed information to the industrious women. The men they served were rebuilding barn after barn. Approximately 22 were destroyed and, for too many, staying in the business of agriculture had already been a struggle for the owners.

Piney Run Farm, owned by Bill Mast, reportedly was unique in that barns were lost to both tornados.

Pat Hipple, Lycoming County's Emergency Services coordinator, a 10-year employee of the Red Cross, was the Salisbury disaster's service center manager.

"This is my first disaster outside my home territory," she reported, explaining that under Pennsylvania law, public school buildings can be used for mass care.

"The people have been wonderful," observed Hipple, "and very cooperative."

The Salvation Army was located in the borough building.

Yoder and Foxwell who, because hands and hearts were needed, said as long as a need continues to exist, they will man their posts. And others loyally assist them.

A nice return for their labors has been to meet the many volunteers that have passed through the cafeteria food lines.

"We have made a lot of really nice friends," they said.

Foxwell expressed pride in the Salisbury-Elk Lick graduating class which, when the first tornado broke loose, was on its senior trip. Seeing, upon their return, a hometown in shambles left the teenagers flabbergasted.

Their commencement on June 7 took a historic turn. The class accepted Meyersdale Area High School's invitation to use its auditorium since the one in their own school was unusable.

"I have pride in the kids who are the future, who graduated at the neighboring school," said Foxwell. "It was a beautiful service," she added.

Yoder is married to Richard Yoder, and their other children are Keith, 17, and Shari, 11.

"I think our kids will have some exhaustion (from the disaster experience) and need time to process what they've seen," the concerned Yoder said.

an access through the 1/2 mile of uprooted trees and limbs that covered the roadway.

"We worked and worked and worked because you could keep hearing them," said the farmer.

Later, when the dairyman tallied the numbers, about 24 head of his prime stock had perished. Those that initially survived were too badly injured to save for any reason.

"The ones that I lost were some of my best ones," Millard reported. "We lost some 2,000 pounds of milk a day right off."

His heifers, however, were at a rental property near Berlin. Since an unused milking parlor came with it, the Millards have moved their entire operation to the site on Lichty Hill Road.

As far as dairy animals, the Millard's loss was probably the heaviest of those reported, although the vortex also demolished countless barns and outbuildings of belonging to his farming neighbors.

Like Wendell and Darlene Yoder who still have a house but also the stress of decision-making.

On the lighter side, Yoder expressed a strong wish that in addition to his barn and various storage sheds, that the tornado did likewise with lots of starlings that had hung around the property.

Bill and Sylvia Mast never dreamed their Piney Run Farms would survive not one, but two disasters withing 48 hours.

Combine, the tornadoes lasted mere seconds, which considering their violent vorticity, make the resultant destruction and devastation that remains, seem even more frightening to area residents. They will never be the same.

It's usually very calm here," Mast reported, "but the first tornado hit the west side of the farm and the second hit the east side."

Thirteen years ago, the barn had burned down, now it was gone again. The destroyed machine shed was only 10 years old and the heifer shed was also gone. Worst of all, the prized stand of timber and his maple trees that were under forest management were gone.

The economic losses he sustained from the mutilation of the maples and hardwoods were greater than the sum of all the rest, including the four dead cows.

"It probably wasn't as hard on me at first as after the second tornado hit, then it was hard on me," confessed the man who puts God first in his life.

Gone were the dependable 4,400 taps from which the sap, in late winter and early spring, drips for evaporation later, into precious maple syrup.

Gone were the tender new maples that Mast knew were ready to enter next year's production potentially, 2,000 more taps.

What sealed the heartbreaking loss for Mast was the discouraging, official report informing him that regrowing a stand of timber such as the trees he lost, will take 40 to 60 years.

He related how he and his wife have generously donated to their church whatever they can supply, such as oak for the trim around its new addition, and their time.

"When I saw the losses, I had to ask, 'Why?'" he said. "Sometimes, we just don't understand."

But despite all, when the waterways cleaning crew began removing debris from Piney Run which flows not far from their house, and exhibited very small forbearance for the Mast's situation, Mast responded with an attitude that was consistent with his faith.

Mennonite Disaster Service, (MDS) and the Salvation Army sent food for all victims and volunteers so with Christian hospitality, Mast invited the surprised men to share the abundant meal. They accepted.

Among the souvenirs dropped on his land by the vortex were business signs from two restaurants in the nearby town of Salisbury.

Mast's wasn't the only timber ravaged by the disaster. Its path over a long line of forested ridges is extremely obvious.

Joseph Kinsinger, his wife, Lovina and their six children, ages 8 years to 3 months, were just finishing the evening milking when the unexpected tornado touched down on their property in Greenville Twp. He was in the engine room of the barn.

"It's an inexplainable feeling," he reported. "The worst thing was I wasn't with the rest of the family.:

Although, at first the generator blocked the sound of the fast approaching twister, it soon outroared the running motor of the generator.

"It sounded worse than any freight train I ever heard,: the young farmer said.

Kinsinger sustained heavy losses, as well. Like Mast he lost 1,200 maple taps and estimates 200 may have survived.

The barn was flattened, four sheds, and two horses gone.

MDS sent food to every farm for volunteers and the MDS support of hands and food will continue until very farmer can return to normal operations.

Edwin and Catherine Lee of Warren's Mill Road, Meyersdale, lost a new horse barn that was under construction and were very thankful that her parents from Kentucky had, 20 minutes earlier, arrived safely to visit their daughter and her family.

One person died as a direct result of the Sunday tornado and 15 injured persons were treated and released from local hospitals.

Bunny Miller's family found that, although the tornado compacted her refrigerator, it spared the dozen eggs that were inside. These were found unbroken, on the ground.

And someone else discovered a Bible. The center was gone but at the end and beginning, pages were still intact.

Perhaps God is affirming that He is the Alpha and Omega. the Beginning and the End. .the First and the Last.

"We were singing until we couldn't sing anymore.' reported Darlene Yoder, mother of four children. "Then we prayed. "At lease we didn't have things flying at us."

"For days we were so dazed we couldn't make decisions. Finally, somebody started making decisions for us." Mrs Yoder said

"We have gained so much out of it," she added. "Both spiritually and from the friends who are taking care of us."

Figures from MDS indicate that in the entire area following both disaster, 55 houses were lost; at least 20 main barns and numerous other shed and storage buildings.

Seventy-four houses received major damage and even greater numbers received minor damage. It is possible the economic and ecological losses will far surpass the rest and be felt well into the future.

Officer Moo Enforces Milk Law In Tioga County

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Tioga Co. Correspondent

WHITNEYVILLE (Tioga Co.) —"Stop! You there, drinking that bottle of soda. How many glasses of milk have you had today?" asks dairy princess candidate Kristina Baker, who transformed herself into Officer Moo, enforcer of the "three a day" rule.

As an enforcer of the law, Baker captured the judges' attention and was crowned the 1998 Tioga County Dairy Princess. Named first and second alternates respectively were Amanda Graves and Emily Norman.

"Wow," said an excited Baker after receiving her crown from 1997 Dairy Princess Ellen Norman. "This is what I've always wanted to do since I was a little girl."

Before crowning the new princess, Ellen Norman thanked everyone for their help in making her year memorable.

"Being a dairy princess this year has meant a lot to me and I can't say enough thanks to everyone who helped me," she said. "The memories I've made this year will last forever."

Judges Doug Droppa, Galeton; Phylis Gilpin, Towanda; and Robin Huizinga, Willseyville, N.Y.; had the task of choosing the new princess.

Each contestant's creative presentation was a part of the contest which included an interview and answering an impromptu question.

Graves took the stage as a roving reporter looking for a glass of milk in a milkless town for her presentation. "I'll have to go on assignment. I need to tell these people about the nutrients in milk," she said.

Past Dairy Princess Ellen Norman, First Alternate Amanda Graves, and Second Alternate Emily Norman surround newly crowned Dairy Princess Kristina Baker after the pageant held recently.

Posing as a scientist, Norman began making a milk substitute, when her experiment boiled over and she realized that you can't replace milk.

"What was I thinking?" she exclaimed. "Milk is perfect—just the way it is!"

She then told just why milk is nature's most nearly perfect food and decided to redirect her career. "Hey, I wonder if I could increase milk production if I could invent a cow with two udders?" she said.

In another portion of the competition, each contestant had to field their best answer to the question: "What are some of the ways you can reach consumers as a dairy princess?"

Answers focused on the ways consumers could be reached directly through one on one conversation or through radio advertisements and newspaper articles.

"You go right to them and talk to them up front," said Baker.

Graves answered, " There are many ways to reach consumers, you can go to elementary schools or to meetings or to grocery stores."

Norman also touched on the importance of face to face communication.

"Some of the ways you can reach consumers is to do store promotions and get out there and talk about the products you're promoting," she said.

Baker, daughter of William and Rebecca Baker of Covington, will be a junior at Mansfield Junior-Senior High School in the fall. She is a member of the Hillbillies 4-H Club, serves on 4-H County Council, is a member of the Mainesburg Youth Group, Pathfinders, and Girl Scouts.

She is also active in her school where she is a member of the National Honor Society.

Graves is the daughter of Dennis and Christine Graves of Little Marsh. She attends Cowanesque Valley High School and will graduate in 1999. She is also a member of the Tioga County 4-H Livestock Club and the Cowanesque Valley Chapter of FFA.

Norman is the daughter of David and Aggie Norman, Liberty. In the fall, she will be a junior at Liberty Junior-Senior High School where she participates in many activities. She is a member of the Liberty Community 4-H Club,

This happens to be my family's favorite recipe. I don't mean just my immediate family either.

My mom, sisters, and even my husband's side of the family take this baked good to reunions and family get togethers. It sure does beat making whoopie pies.

My husband and I are expecting our fourth child and I'm always in search of quick and easy recipes. We live on a dairy farm, which makes milk a very easy commodity to us. That's why I also look for milk as being part of a good wholesome recipe.

Hello, again from Sugar Valley. Power saws have been running all day due to a bad storm last night. Joe had lost of limbs to saw up from the many trees that were damaged.

Hay making has begun. Our Amish neighbors will get some of the hay. We appreciate when they help with the baling.

Our Wyoming son, Tim, is expected home this week along with our 15-year-old grandson, Jason. He plans to help Joe with hay making if the weather is fit.

Since having my daughter, Shellbi, nearly three years ago, I've become a stay-at-home "mommy" and homemaker. We enjoy flower and vegetable gardening and being outside.

My husband, Stephen, keeps busy raising six flocks of broiler chickens per year, averaging 90,000 each time. He also helps his father on the home farm. He enjoys hunting when time permits.

Even though our farming operation only includes broilers and steers, dairy products are a large part of our diet.

CHERRY-CHEESE DANISH FOR A CROWD

16 ounces cream cheese, room temperature
½ up granulated sugar
1 large egg
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
2 packages refrigerated crescent-roll dough
21-ounce can cherry pie filling, well drained
Glaze: 1 egg yolk beaten with 1 teaspoon water.
Garnish: confectioners' sugar

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly butter a jelly roll pan (cookie sheet with sides).

In a medium-size bowl, mix cream cheese, sugar, egg, and vanilla with a large wooden spoon until smooth.

Remove dough from 1 crescent roll package. Unroll and place in middle of prepared pan. Pat out with fingers, pressing perforations together, until dough completely covers bottom of pan. Warm in oven 4 minutes until slighlty dry (to set bottom crust).

Remove from oven and cool slightly. Spread cream cheese mixture over dough evenly to edges.

Scatter cherries evenly over cheese.

Unroll remaining sheet of crescent-roll dough and separate into 8 triangles along perforations. Arrange triangles on top of cherries. They will not cover the surface completely; just be sure to space them evenly. Brush triangles with egg glaze.

Bake 30 minutes, or until top crust is golden and cheese mixture is set.

Cool in pan on wire rack before dusting with confectioners' sugar. Serves 16.

I live on a farm with my husband Mark and two sons, Aaron, 7, and Jared, 5. We raise replacement dairy heifers, corn, and soybeans. I look forward to the recipe section of Lancaster Farming every week.

This is an easy and very yummy cake! Hello to all you dairy fans. We again look forward to the month of June and its extra special this year.

Last year we were blessed with our first boy. A whooper who weighed 10 pounds 2 ounces. Born on June 10. Jeremy was happily greeted by dad, mom, Jessica, 7, and Anne, 6. So he'll be one soon and he is a dairy fan for he loves his goat milk. His favorite sounds are "moo" or "baa."

A healthy, happy, and safe summer to all.

At least once a day, stop to smell a flower or watch a bird. It'll be good to you.

The "Cow Lady," Erica Davis, believes that fieldwork can get done sooner with the high energy available in her milk punch.

'REAL' RASPBERRY PUNCH

1 pint milk
1 cup vanilla ice cream
1 pint raspberry sherbet
1 cup ginger ale

Mix ingredients in a blender until frothy. Or, in a large bowl, mix softened ice cream and sherbet together. Slowly add milk. Add ginger ale. Makes four cups.

During the past year this recipe has become a favorite in the family and also with friends who have tasted it at promotions — even those who were not sure what milk punch was! I can guarantee this milk punch will be making its debut at Penn State when I go to the main campus in a few months!

Enjoy this easy-to-make tasty drink during the next few months when fieldwork is in full bloom. You won't have to spend a lot of time making it and the workers will thank you. They will appreciate not only the taste, but the energy and nutrients that all milk products provide. Who knows — fieldwork may even get done sooner!

OLD GERMAN SAND TARTS

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Here I sit listening to the Grandfather's clock ticking away as I consider what to write about today. It is something that you will read 10 days from now.

I could mention that goldfinch that I saw eating lettuce in my garden this morning or the big flock of wild geese that flew overhead. My mind is on the dentist appointment this afternoon and that distracts me too.

Or I could mention the performance that my sister and I saw at the Fulton Theater this past week. It was called "Lancaster Speaks" and actors and actresses told of how they happened to come to our town. I expected it to be more historical, but it was well done. Afterward, we had to drive home in a rain storm—we've had several lately.

It seems that when our children call home, they always have someplace that they are traveling in the near future. One is going to Corpus Christi, Texas, for four days with her family while another will vacation in Colorado. Our farm family expects to spend 10 days traveling to Nova Scotia. And, the New Jersey family owns a summer home near Seattle, Washington.

I have not quite traveled around the world but I have been to Europe three times and to Alaska, Hawaii, and the Caribbean plus all over America. So, my traveling days may well be behind me.

Today we'll finish picking our big crop of black raspberries Then come the red raspberries and also the yellow ones that look very promising. Our hull peas gave us a big crop and so did the sugar peas For the first time this year, my husband was able to pick enough sweet, yellow cherries and sour red ones for me to can some There is always work here at home.

Cumberland Dairy Princess Represents Big Business

BOILING SPRINGS (Cumberland Co.) – Dairy farming is big business in Cumberland County. Dairy farmers produced 346 million pounds of milk last year. That is 157.4 million quarts. Farmers received almost $54,224.000 for this production. Cumberland County's milk production and value of products ranks seventh amount the 67 Pennsylvania counties.

Rebecca Cornman, daughter of Debbie and Steve Cornman, Boiling Springs, was selected to represent 295 dairy farms located in the county. Rebecca was crowned Cumberland County Dairy Princess on June 12. Rebecca is a junior at Boiling Springs High School. Her activities include cross country, track, drama club, National Honor Society, concert choir, church youth group and 4-H dairy club. Her hobbies and interest include - showing cows, running quilting and traveling.

The new dairy princess was crowned by the 1997 Dairy Princess Kristin Heberlig at the 31st Annual Cumberland County Dairy Princess Coronation.

Vicki Lantz, Newville, Big Spring vocational agriculture instructor, served as master of ceremonies at the coronation. The group was entertained by the Boiling Springs High School Men's Ensemble.

Rebecca presented her skit and speech at the coronation, which she will present at the state contest in September. Skits and readings were presented by 1998 Dairy Maids, Amy Kulick, daughter of James and Ann Kulick, Carlisle, and Amy Kaucher, daughter of Bonnie Kaucher and Harold Leib, Mechanicsburg.

More than 55 appearances were logged by 1997 Dairy Princess Kristen Heberlig, and Alternate Dairy Princess Tisha Myers, Carlisle, and Dairy Maids, Rebecca Cornman, Boiling Springs; Julia Fulton, Shippensburg; Heather Brown, Mechanicsburg; and Sonya Rinker, Carlisle.

Eleven of the appearances were at elementary schools in the Carlisle and Shippensburg School District. Eleven days were devoted to presenting 95 educational programs at nine schools to 3,792 student and teachers.

Cumberland County Dairy Princess Rebecca Cornman, center, will represent the county's $55 million dairy industry with the help of dairy maids Amy Kaucher, left, and Amy Kulick.

Dairy Princess Teaches 'Cowdergarten' Class

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

MUNCY (Lycoming Co.) — "I'm your teacher," said Lycoming County Dairy Princess candidate Melissa Daly as she prepared to give her presentation to the crowd.

During her skit, she told the story of milk to all of her "cowdergarten" class members. "Cows are useful to the dairy farmers because they produce milk," she said.

After performing her skit and answering impromptu questions posed by Master of Ceremonies Todd Stewart, Melissa Daly accepted the Lycoming County Dairy Princess Crown at a pageant held June 12 at the Lycoming Mall.

The daughter of Richard and Wenda Daly, Melissa will be heading to Penn State University in the fall where she will major in dairy and animal science. She is active in the National Ski Patrol, Earth Watch Patrol, and the 118 Ag 4-H Club in which she serves as president. She also lends a helping hand on her family's Wen-Rich farm where she owns and shows one Holstein cow.

Outgoing Dairy Princess Melanie Harris presented the crown to Daly, who also served the county as the 1997 alternate dairy princess.

Harris offered thanks to everyone who helped her throughout her reign.

"Last year my ag teacher came up to me and asked if I had ever thought about running for dairy princess. I decided it was a risk I had to take," she said. "So I went for it!"

Also promoting the dairy industry in Lycoming County are four dairy maids. Donnica and Vanessa Greider, daughters of Jeffrey and Donna Greider of Linden; Janele Hearn, daughter of Rodney and Crystal Hearn; and Shelly Vandine, daughter of Wayne and Ruth Vandine of Muncy.

Donnica Greider will be a ninth grade student at Jersey Shore High School in the fall where she is a member of the yearbook staff. She is also a member of the Bottle Run 4-H Club.

Vanessa Greider is also a member of the Bottle Run 4-H Club. In the fall, she will be a 7th grade student at Jersey Shore Junior High School.

Janele Hearn in an 11th grade student at Hughesville High School where she is a member of the Future Business Leaders of America and plays soccer. She is a member of the 118 Ag 4-H Club.

Shelly Vandine is a 10th grade student at Muncy High School where she is a member of the girls soccer team. She also is a member of the Pioneer Valley 4-H Club.

CRUNCHY STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM PIE

⅓ cup butter, softened
2 cups cornflakes, slightly crushed (crush after measuring)
½ cup flaked coconut
½ cup nuts
1 quart vanilla ice cream
¾ cup freshly cut strawberries

Measure sugar and butter into a mixing bowl. Beat until light and fluffy. Add cornflakes, nuts, and coconut. Mix until combined. Reserve ¼ cup cornflake mixture for topping. Press remaining mixture evenly and firmly in bottom and around sides of pie pan to form crust. Chill, then spread in ice cream. Sprinkle with reserved cornflakes and top with fresh strawberries.

I am 15 years old and live on a 90-acre dairy farm and we milk an average of 60 cows. I enjoy helping on the farm, milking cows, and feeding calves and heifers. I have three sisters and four brothers. Three of my brothers are married, which means I only have one brother at home. I usually get the chance to help with the farm work.

This ice cream dessert is delicious on a warm summer day.

I'm bookkeeper, busy mother, and "gopher."

I grew up milking cows and loved it. Now we use two gallons of milk a week.

This is one of our favorite ways to use potatoes. We all love them. We have a family of three, Emmy Lou, 6; Regina Mae, 5; and Jonathan Lee, 2.

We live on a farm and milk Jersey cows. I also make butter from the rich milk. We like to keep busy on the farm.

We plant and harvest crops suitable for the dairy. We also grow 8 acres potatoes strictly for table use, 7 acres of red and one of white. I help with the milking and feed the calves.

BANANA SPLIT DESSERT

⅔ cup butter, melted
2 to 3 bananas
½ gallon neapolitan ice cream
1 cup chopped English walnuts
1 cup chocolate chips
½ cup butter
2 cups confectioners' sugar
1½ cup whole milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 pint whipping cream

Prepare crust from crumbs and ⅔ cup butter; reserve 1 cup crumbs. Press remaining crumb mixture into bottom of 11x15-inch baking pan. Slice bananas and layer over crust. Cut ice cream in ½ -inch thick slices and place over bananas. Sprinkle ice cream with the nuts. Freeze until firm. Melt chocolate chips and ½ cup butter. Add confectioners' sugar and milk. Cook mixture until thick and smooth, stirring constantly. Remove from heat; add vanilla. Cool chocolate mixture; pour over ice cream. Freeze until firm. Whip cream until stiff. Spread over chocolate mixture. Top with reserved crumbs. Store in freezer. Remove about 10 to 15 minutes before serving. Yields 25 servings. Half of recipe makes 9x13-inch pan. Will keep for several weeks.

My husband James and I live on a dairy farm with our two daughters and one son, ages 3 and 5 months. Children like playing in the barn during milking time and also like to help feed the baby calves. Tending our garden keeps me busy too. And I love trying out new recipes.

CARAMEL ROLLS

½ cup whipping cream
2 loaves frozen bread dough, thawed
3 tablespoons butter, melted
½ cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon cinnamon

Mix together powdered sugar and whipping cream in a small bowl. Divide mixture evenly between two 9x1½ -inch round baking pans. Set aside.

Roll out 1 loaf thawed bread dough on a lightly floured surface into a 12x8-inch rectangle. Brush with 1½ tablespoons melted butter.

In a small bowl, mix together brown sugar and cinnamon. Sprinkle half of the brown sugar mixture over buttered dough. Roll up jelly roll style. Cut into 10 or 12 slices. Repeat with other loaf.

Place slices, cut-side down, a top cream mixture in round pans. Let rise, covered, 30 minutes.

Bake in 375 degree oven 20-25 minutes. If necessary, cover rolls with foil last 5 minutes to prevent browning. Cool in pans 5 minutes on wire racks.

These rolls can be covered with well-greased waxed paper, after cut slices are placed in pans before rising. Cover the wax paper with plastic wrap and refrigerate for 2-24 hours. Remove from refrigerator and let stand 20 minutes. Baking time is 25-30 minutes for chilled rolls.

This is a great recipe for mornings when you don't have enough time for rolling out dough. I have also used half and half and light cream for the heavy cream in the recipe.

CUSTARD PIE

4 slightly beaten eggs
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
2½ cups milk, scalded
9-inch unbaked pastry shell (roll dough to less than ⅛ -inch)

Mix egg, sugar, salt, and vanilla thoroughly. Slowly stir in the hot milk. Pour at once into unbaked pastry shell. Top with nutmeg. Bake in hot oven at 475 degrees for 5 minutes. Reduce heat to 425 degrees and bake 10 to 15 minutes longer or until knife inserted halfway between center and edge comes out clean. After you have mixed hot milk with the remaining ingredients, add your favorite fresh fruit or berries (¾ to 1 cup) and bake.

Deep Dish Custard: Use same recipe but bake without crust in a glass dish at 450 degrees for 10 minutes, reduce heat to 400 degrees, and bake 15 minutes more.

My family likes blueberries in my custards. I also use strawberries that is also very good.

I hope you like this as much as we do.

My daughter Lori Ann Spatz is on the left and is a special education teacher in the Daniel Boone School District. She lives in Dryville with the remainder of her family. Her husband, Allen, works for Hershey Chocolate USA, Luden's division, Reading.

I am secretary for Zion Moselem Luthern Church for 36 years and on the church choir for a number of years.

My grandchildren Christopher Spatz, 7, is in first grade at Rockland Elementary; Stephanie Spatz just completed preschool at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Fleetwood, and will be entering kindergarten in the fall at Rockland Elementary.

My daughter-in-law, Tara Stitzel is a Pampered Chef consultant and also works in her father's podiatry office in Kutztown.

When I entered the contest last year, they thought she might have twins, but later found out it was just one. My grandson Brandon Todd, weighed 10 pounds 6 ounces, and was 23-inches long. He is now six months old and very enjoyable to be around. I love my grandchildren very much.

My husband, Lee, and son Tom drill wells. My other son, Todd is a teacher in business education at Governor Mifflin. Besides these jobs, they are also busy with farming and remodeling a house. We are all busy but with a little understanding, we get through it all.

We enjoy the Lancaster Farming very much.

LAYERED PIZZA DIP

½ cup sour cream
¼ cup freshly grated parmesan cheese
½ teaspoon garlic salt
½ cup prepared pizza sauce
¾ cup shredded mozzarella cheese
3.5 ounces sliced pepperoni, finely chopped
Toasted pita bread wedges to serve

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a small bowl, beat cream cheese until fluffy. Stir in sour cream, parmesan cheese, and garlic salt. Spread into a lightly greased 9-inch pie plate. Spread pizza sauce over cream cheese mixture. Sprinkle mozzarella cheese over pizza sauce and top with pepperoni. Bake about 20 minutes or until heated through. Serve warm with pita bread. Yield about 3 cups dip.

Tastes more like lasagna than pizza to me, but it is still delicious.

I am dating Ken Rexroth who is a farmer in York County. He and his son own and farm about 2000 acres. They milk 150 cows and have several hundred beef cattle. They are also crop and grain farmers—corn, soybeans, barley, wheat, and alfalfa. I cook lunch for them and their hired help and during the busy times that can be as many as 10. I enjoy cooking and do a lot of crockpot meals because I work as a secretary away from the farm 3 days a week. Baking desserts is my specialty and I've tried quite a few recipes from Lancaster Farming, some of which have become favorites tha I make quite often.

I just love the "June Dairy Month-Cow Mania Contest" issues because of the amount of recipes printed and the interesting farm stories that accompany them.

CREAMY RASPBERRY DESSERT

Crust:
1 cup graham cracker crumbs
3 tablespoons sugar
¼ cup butter, melted
Filling:
10-ounces frozen raspberries, thawed
¼ cup cold water
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
8-ounces cream cheese, softened
½ cup sugar
1 cup whipping cream, whipped
Cream for garnish

Combine crumbs, 3 tablespoons sugar and butter. Press into bottom of an 8-inch or 9-inch springform pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 10 minutes. Cool. Meanwhile, for filling, drain raspberries and reserve juice. Set berries aside. In a small saucepan, combine juice, cold water, and gelatin. Let stand 5 minutes. Cook and stir over low heat until gelatin dissolves. Remove from heat; cool for 10 minutes. In a mixing bowl, beat cream cheese and sugar until blended. Add berries and gelatin mixture; beat on low until thoroughly blended. Chill until partially set. Watch carefully, as mixture will set up quickly. By hand, gently fold in whipped cream. Spoon into crust. Chill for six hours or overnight. Just before serving, run knife around edge of pan to loosen. Remove sides of pan. Top with fresh raspberries and whipped cream. Yield: 10 servings.

Do ahead and delicious, this dessert is a favorite because of its pretty color, creamy texture, and terrific flavor. A light, no bake filling makes it easy. Try garnishing with fresh berries and sprigs of mint.

LUSCIOUS STRAWBERRY CREAM PUFFS

½ cup butter
1 cup water
1 cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
3 eggs, room temperature

Place water and butter in saucepan. Sift flour then measure again and blend in the salt. Grease a large cookie sheet. Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Bring butter and water to a boil quickly then when boiling point is reached, add the flour all at once. Cook the batter, stirring constantly until it is smooth and forms a ball. Remove from heat and beat in the eggs, one at a time. Spoon batter into greased baking sheet, forming approximately 12 mounds. Allow 2 inches between each one. Bake in preheated oven for 30 to 35 minutes. If they seem to be browning too quickly, reduce temperature to 375 degrees. Test for doneness by removing one from the oven. If it does not collapse, they are done. When they are cold, split, and fill with the following mixture:

1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup strawberries, mashed
½ cup sifted confectioners' sugar

June is dairy month and strawberry season. This is one of our favorite recipes. We live on a 90-acre dairy farm and milk about 40-45 cows. We raise our own replacement heifers and farm hay, corn, and tobacco. Our son, Abram, 2½ years, would rather be on the farm with his dad than anywere else.

CARAMEL PUDDING

2 cups brown sugar
½ cup butter
½ cup water
6 eggs

5 rounded tablespoons flour
Vanilla

Brown together brown sugar and butter. When browned, add ½ cup water. Remove from stove. Add 2 quarts milk.

Blend eggs, cornstarch, and flour in blender, then add to above mixture.

Bring to a boil. Add vanilla and put through blender again for a smooth pudding. Since this pudding contains both corn starch and flour, it does not separate when stirred after it has cooled.

PIZZA RICE CASSEROL

1 onion, chopped
2 cups tomato sauce
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
¼ teaspoon oregano
1 teaspoon parsley flakes
½ cup cottage cheese
2 cups cooked rice
½ -1 cup shredded cheese

Brown ground beef and onion. Add next seven ingredients. Cover and simmer 15 minutes. Mix cottage cheese and rice. Layer rice mixture and meat mixture into buttered 6-quart casserole dish. Sprinkle with desired amount of cheese. Bake at 325 degrees for 30 minutes or until bubbly hot.

Our family enjoys this casserole very much. Sometimes I substitute spaghetti or pizza sauce for the tomato sauce. I also use brown rice, and have increased the cottage cheese to approximately one cup since we enjoy more cottage cheese flavor.

Our family lives on a farm where we tend the broiler chicken flock and the heifers for the farm owner. My husband, Joseph, also works at White Oak Mills, Elizabethtown, in swine production management.

The Lord has blessed us with six children: James, 14; Laura, 9; Joanna, 8; Nathan, 5; David, 3; and Joel, 3 months. We are a homeschooling family. We enjoy living in the country.

Family member interests and hobbies include gardening, sewing, reading, biking, playing Legos, picnicking, having company, and "tinkering" on equipment or repairs. I also enjoy finding new recipes to use from the B-section of Lancaster Farming.

Laura Peachey Wears Mifflin County Crown

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — With pre-pageant jitters barely showing, Laura Peachey of Belleville smiled for photographers for the first time in a year's worth of dairy princess publicity photos. Laura, the only contestant, accepted the title at the Mifflin County Dairy Princess Pageant held last week in conjunction with the Mifflin County Holstein Club picnic.

Rain forced the event indoors at the Belleville Mennonite School but failed to dampen the crowd's enthusiasm for a good meal, for socializing with friends and neighbors, and for supporting the dairy industry. By the end of the evening, Laura was wearing her new tiara and sash, former dairy princesses were saying good-bye after another successful reunion, and folks were gathering their purchases from the dairy promotion benefit auction.

Sixteen-year-old Laura Peachey is not a stranger to farm life. She rolls out of bed at 4:30 in the morning to help her father milk the family's Hostein herd before going to school. How many cows are milked that early in the morning?

"Too many! Laura replies with a wide grin and a sparkle in her eyes.

Laura is the daughter of Sheldon and Barbara Peachey.

Mifflin County's new Dairy Princess, Laura Peachey, will be spreading the word that dairy products are essential for good health. She recently accepted her crown from outgoing princess Marlene Smith at the pageant and Holstein Club picnic.

She has shown dairy animals for more than six years as a member of the Mifflin County 4-H Dairy Club. She attends the Belleville Mennonite School and is active in the concert choir and basketball team. In her spare time, she enjoys reading and spending time with her family and friends.

Much of her spare time now will be spent promoting the use of dairy products. Her predecessor, Marlene Smith of Belleville, conducted 80 school visits, 21 radio spots, and 58 newspaper reports In spite of what sounds like more work, Laura's looking forward to her year as dairy princess.

"I've always had fun helping the dairy princesses in the past. I enjoy people," Laura says, whose family milks 85 Holsteins.

Laura received good advice from several former dairy princesses that evening. They were invited to the pageant for a reunion. Susan (Fisher) Stringer, Donna (McKee) Rhodes, Judy (Sunderland) Goss, Jaylene (Yoder) Hess, and Diane Yoder met before dinner to reminisce.

"I remember riding in the Halloween Parade in Lewistown, when I heard one child say, 'Here comes Miss America!'" Donna McKee said with a laugh.

Donna believes serving as dairy princess from 1980 to 1981 helped her become more confident with public speaking and with communicating in general. She is an author of two children's books and is an ordained pastor of nurture at Juniata College's Stone Church in Huntingdon.

As dairy princess from 1986 to 1987, Susan Stringer presented her milk message to children throughout the school district. She is now a substitute elementary and day care teacher. "Being a dairy princess pushed me into knowing that I wanted to be a teacher. We did so many school demonstrations."

Jaylene Hess said that being a dairy princess from 1988 to 1989 helped confirm what she already suspected—that she wanted the dairy industry to be part of her future. Jaylene and her husband, John, dairy farm on his home farm near Gettysburg. She said, "I had a radio personality call me from Ohio. He wanted to know if cows eat their own dairy products. I played along, saying they were just mooing for more!"

Diane Yoder, a dairy princess in Bucks County from 1993 to 1994 and in Mifflin County from 1995 to 1996, said she gained more confidence in speaking in front of groups. She now sells advertising for WCHX and Star Country in Burnham.

Former dairy princess Judy Goss encouraged her daughters to become dairy princesses. Erin Goss served as dairy princess from 1994 to 1995 while Megan Goss just completed her year as alternate dairy princess.

The evening program began with a welcome by Beth Laughlin, chairperson of the dairy princess committee. Victor Yoder, president of the Mifflin County Holstein Club, served as master of ceremony.

Laura presented a skit and speech, which she'll present again during the state competition. Marlene Smith gave her farewell speech. Also introduced were Dairy Maids Candace Glick, Alisha Glick, and Valerie Kanagy; Dairy Misses Jackie Byler, Jena Kauffman, Kristi Sellers, Anna Smith, Virginia Smith, Lisa Yoder, and Lauren Yoder; and L'il Misses, Arika Snyder, Tonya Peachey, and Katherine Laughlin. An auction concluded the evening's activities.

We do want to help whenever possible, and for that reason, sometimes include complete addresses if the request requires a mailing address. This is at the editor's discretion and we realize that some may disagree with this policy.

Other interests are reading, running, drawing, photography, teaching swimming and the internet. She is currently employed as a waitress at two restaurants, part-time and works on their small family farm.

For her skit, Michelle answered a call from a six-year-old, on the "Dairy Hot Line." She quickly informed the child of his need for dairy products, explaining his body's need to consume three to four servings a day, and how to buy "real" dairy products by looking for the "real seal." Hanging up from her call, she was anxious to help the next person learn of their need for dairy products.

Having served as the 1997 alternate Dairy Princess, Michelle is looking forward to continuing her work in promoting and educating the consumer about the importance of dairy products.

Both Megan and Michelle will be attending the state-wide training seminar at Lycoming College in Williamsport, July 6-9.

Chicken Reigns At 50th Delmarva Festival

MILLSBORO, Del. — Worth its weight in gold! Certainly that is not the cost of chicken to consumers, but it sure describes the value of the chicken industry to the Delmarva Peninsula. That importance was recognized at the 50th anniversary Delmarva Chicken Festival the weekend of June 12 and 13 in Millsboro, Delaware. The golden anniversary festival, combined with 50 years of service to the local chicken industry by its trade association, Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. (DPI), created the theme for this year's fun-packed event.

From the opening ceremonies in which Delaware Governor Tom Carper and other community leaders reaped high praise on the industry while noting its valuable economic contributions to the closing entertainment, thousands of person enjoyed this community event hosted by the Greater Millsboro Chamber of Commerce.

Chicken festival guests had the opportunity to learn about the 75-year history of Delmarva's chicken industry thanks to an exhibit planned and manned by educators with the University of Delaware and University of Maryland Cooperative Extension. Visitors could see displays about the economic importance of the industry, visit commercial vendors, hear a variety of musical entertainment, and of course, enjoy chicken.

Using chicken provided by Townsends, Inc., cooking oil donated by Purdue Farms Inc., and coating provided by McCormick's, the Millsboro Lions Club cooked thousands of chicken quarters in one of the trademarks of the festival. DPI's giant frying pan was heated by gas donated by the Mid Atlantic Propane Gas Association.

During the chicken capers games Saturday afternoon, teams from Perdue Farms Inc. Salisbury, Maryland processing plant and Perdue Farms Inc. Delmarva broilers live-production captured honors in the relay races among the area's poultry companies. Chicken Capers, organized by DPI's Allied Industry Committee, attracted hundreds of spectators and scores of contestants to the many activities.

Of course, a highlight of the event was the Delmarva Chicken Cooking Contest in which cooks from the Mid-Atlantic and Northeast United States prepared their entries on Frigidaire ranges. The announcement of the winners as made Saturday night. Selected as the winning recipe was "Smothered Chicken with Gingery Mango Sauce," prepared by Dorrie Mednick of Baltimore, Maryland. Her prizes were a Caribbean vacation for two, $1,000, Cutco cutlery, LP gas grill, and a McCormick spice rack with spices. All entries from the contest, plus recipes and features from past years are contained in a new publication "Chicken Cookery" available from DPI. To order, send a check for $2 per book and your name and address to Chicken Cookery, Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc., RD 6, Box 47, Georgetown, DE 19947-9575.

Professional food writers from across the country who were invited by DPI to watch and report on the chicken cooking contest heard from Jim Perdue, chairman of the board of Perdue Farms Inc. He spoke of some of the new and anticipated developments in the poultry industry. Among the challenges he mentioned were working with the new U.S. Department of Agriculture processing plant inspection system, continuing to work on clean water and nutrient management issues, and marketing effectively in these times of increased meat production in the United States. One new development for consumers is the trend toward "home meal replacements." This is a huge and growing market that serves consumers who want to "heat and eat."

Olive Oil Facts

Olive oil may have been good for Popeye the sailor man, who downed cans of spinach in a single gulp, in more than one way. Olive oil and other fats high in monounsaturated fatty acids are becoming well known for helping lower LDL-cholesterol (the so-called bad cholesterol) while protecting HDL-cholesterol (good cholesterol) when consumed in moderation in place of saturated fats.

Moderation, of course, is key. Like all other oils, olive oil is 100 percent fat. This means it has more than twice as many calories as an equal amount of protein or carbohyydrate. So while there may be some truth to the heart-healthy claims made about olive oil, if weight-loss is part of your program, keep in mind that calories from olive oil will add up just as fast as calories from butter or corn oil.

The difference among oils is not in their number of calories but in their composition. While fats derived from animal sources — butter, cream, hard cheeses — have a high proportion of saturated fats, oils from plant sources are higher in unsaturated fats. Among the plant oils, olive, canola, and peanut oil are highest in monounsaturated fatty acids. Olive oil is pressed from the fruit of the olive tree. Both the type of olive tree and the conditions under which it is grown, such as climate and soil, affect the flavor of the olives produced, and thus the oil pressed from the fruit.

Olive oils referred to as virgin are from the first pressing. Extra virgin is also from the first pressing and is the most common type of olive oil sold in the United States. It is a bit higher priced because it offers the widest variety of flavors and is produced in smaller quantities. Extra virgin olive oil is dark green in color and has a rich, fruity taste. This is the oil of choice where a full-bodied flavor is desired, as in salad dressings, marinades, and sauces.

A product titled simply olive oil is usually a blend of virgin olive oils, some of which have been filtered or refined. These are the classic golden oils, a bit milder in taste than the virgin oils. This is the all-purpose olive oil, great for sauteing, stir-frying, in pasta sauces and marinades.

Extra light olive oil refers to flavor, not calories. These oils still have nine calories per gram, but lend themselves better to recipes that call for a milder flavor such as baking. To keep from being confused with low-calorie, new labeling laws will soon require manufacturers to use mild in place of light. If you are new to olive oil, or find the flavor of virgin oil too strong, this is a great oil to start with. This pale yellow oil has a subtle flavor that does not carry over into other foods. With the highest smoke point of all the olive oils at 468 degrees, this is the appropriate olive oil to use for deep frying and sauteing at high temperatures.

Olive oil, like other oils, is degraded by exposure to heat and light. It can be stored in a tightly sealed container away from heat and light for up to two years. During hot months, the refrigerator is a good storage place, although the oil will solidify and turn cloudy. Simply bring back to room temperature before using.

House Goes Home Without Passing Research/Crop Insurance Bill

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A dispute over food stamp benefits resulted in members of the U.S. House leaving recently for a 10-day congressional recess without passing the final version of the agriculture research bill.

Action on the research bill, which also included provisions to fund crop insurance and partially restore food stamp benefits for legal immigrants, stopped when House members voted 120-289 against the "rule" which would have stripped food stamp funding from the bill.

"It is critical that the House move forward with this bill," said NFU President Leland Swenson. "Sales closing dates for crop insurance are coming up fast, and the uncertainty caused by the House's failure to pass the bill jeopardizes crop insurance coverage for many. Now is not the time to cripple our nation's crop insurance system."

The U.S. Senate, by a 92-8 vote, passed the conference committee bill to fund research and crop insurance. President Bill Clinton pledged to sign the measure once it reaches his desk. The bill is a five-year, $1.7 billion measure, which includes $600 million in new funding for agriculture research, $1 billion for crop insurance, and $100 million for the Fund for Rural America. It also restores benefits for 250,00 legal immigrants, mostly those who are elderly and disabled, and who were U.S. residents as of Aug. 22, 1996, when the welfare reform law was signed.

"NFU urges House members to promptly reconsider the bill as passed by the Senate and supported by the president," Swenson said. "Failure to consider the bill on a timely basis could result in money allocated to research being moved to increase highway spending.

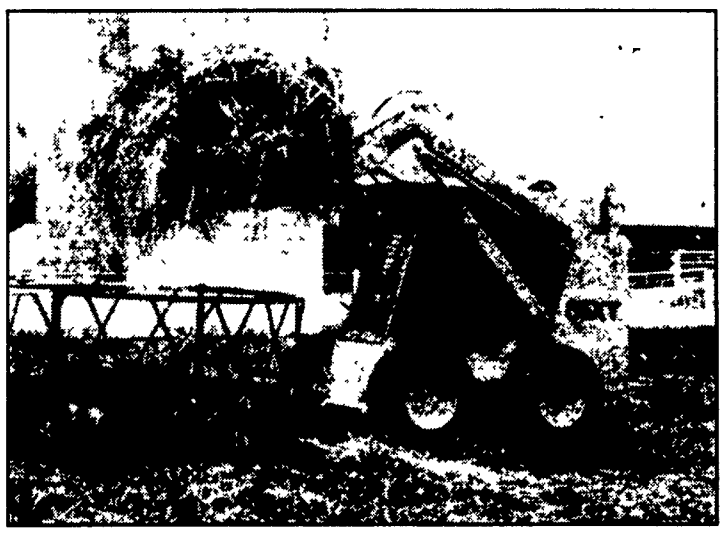
The Solution To Your Growing Needs



With an SAE rated operating load of 2,370 lbs. (1075 kg) and a lift height of 10 feet (3.05 m), this vertical, heavy lift-and-reach machine is ideal for applications such as landscaping, recycling, masonry, general building construction and agriculture. But, don't limit it to those alone. This versatile tool carrier can be customized to fit any number of applications.

The 85XT comes standard with a 3000 psi (207 bar), 25 gpm (94.6 L/min) auxiliary hydraulic pump, and an optional 38 gpm (143.8 L/min) high-flow system is available to run high-speed attachments such as stump grinders, rockwheels and rotary tillers. Adding high-flow to your XT does not replace the standard auxiliary pump – it means you have two auxiliary systems to maximize your attachment compatibility.

The loader arms on an 85XT are the same as those on the 95XT. These durable, heavy-duty arms were designed with extra strength and rigidity to provide exceptional performance in digging applications also. As an option, the 85XT can be equipped with hydraulic attachment self-leveling.

Timothy Elkner, Penn State Cooperative Extension, Lancaster County

We are now moving into summer, the main season for vegetable production As usual, the weather has been anything but ordinary First we had cool, wet weather, then hot and dry, then hot and wet, and now we're back to hot and dry An next week - who knows?

Unfortunately, these variations in the weather make it difficult for you to produce a high quality crop When we have these types of variable conditions your attention to detail will affect the ultimate quality of the crop

Hot, dry weather will require you to pay close attention to the water status of your fields Alternating periods of excessively wet and then hot and dry weather will stress your plants because it will affect root growth During the wet periods root growth will be reduced because the plants will have adequate water with only a small root area

However, when the weather suddenly turns hot and dry this small mass of roots will not be able to supply the water that the plant needs. So watch your fields closely this week and next for the early signs of water stress and apply water before growth is slowed and yields are reduced

When you do irrigate be sure to water thoroughly Drip irrigation allows water to be applied at a rate that will be readily absorbed by the soil If you are using overhead irrigation be sure to apply the water at a rate that will allow it to absorbed into the soil rather than running off Maximum irrigation rates are 0 40 inch per hour for sandy soils, 0 30 inch per hour for loamy soils, and 0 20 inch per hour for clay soils

Blotchy Ripening of Greenhouse Tomatoes Blotchy ripening of tomatoes in greenhouses is a frustrating experience for tomato growers Every spring I receive calls from growers asking how to solve this problem

Unfortunately, blotchy ripening can be caused by several factors including excessive heat, high humidity, low light levels and low potassium levels Some varieties are more likely to experience this problem as well What should you do if you are having this problem? The first thing to do is to have a tissue test to determine if low levels of potassium are to blame This is the most common cause of blotchy ripening and the easiest to solve.

Environmental factors such as temperature and humidity are not easily controlled and you need to minimize the effects of these factors by variety selection. For greenhouse production of tomatoes you should plant varieties developed to grow in a greenhouse Examples are Trust, President, and Match

Some people don't want to grow greenhouse varieties because they are afraid that these types have less taste than regular varieties However, these newer cultivars produce a very high quality tomato and I would encourage you to try one or more of these varieties if you are having problems with uneven ripening.

Late Blight and Early Blight of Tomatoes. The potential exists to have problems with Late Blight this year There have already been documented cases of Late Blight in Pennsylvania, New York, and Ohio.

There is the possibility that more Late Blight is present in PA because of the large number of potatoes that overwintered in harvested fields from last year Our mild winter did not kill these tubers as it normally would have so the potential for more Late Blight innoculum is greater because it survives in overwintering tubers.

Growers are advised to scout tomato and potato fields regularly during weather favorable for the development of this potentially devastating disease.

Weather conditions have already been favorable for Early Blight development on early-planted tomatoes in Lancaster county Dr Alan MacNab of the Pathology Department at Penn State is advising a fungicide application to tomatoes planted in early to mid-May Fields planted after mid-May should if crop rotation is being practiced and fields are scouted regularly. Growers can receive the latest disease updates by calling the PDA's hotline at 1-800-PENN-IPM You need a touch tone phone to utilize these reports.

Sweet Corn IPM

Sweet corn growers who planted for the early market are harvesting some of the earliest corn they have ever grown, thanks to our warmer-than-normal spring. However, this same warm weather is also resulting in the early appearance of corn earworms.

Normally these pests have to migrate up from the warmer southern areas but this year they are already in our area. Fortunately, the population is currently below damaging levels. However, I advise growers to follow the population levels of both corn earworm and European corn borer, our regular early-season pest.

Scout fields regularly for these pests, especially during corn silking, and adjust your spray schedules appropriately You can also receive an updated report on the trap catches of the corn pests by calling the PDA hotline mentioned above.

Harvest Procedures

Finally, growers should strive to preserve the quality present at harvest in their produce by following proper harvest and handling procedures.

First, harvest your crops at the proper maturity for your market Zucchini should be small and tender while cantaloupes should be harvested at half-slip to full slip to have the best taste. Harvest in the cool of morning whenever possible and move harvested produce to a cool, shaded location as soon as possible.

Store any harvested produce for the shortest time necessary The sooner you get your produce to market or the consumer, the better their eating experience will be. And always handle produce like the delicate commodity it is Avoid drops, bruising and any rough handling procedures. The extra care you take when harvesting and handling your produce will result in more satisfied buyers and more return sales for you

Recently, weather reports showed unseasonably warm temperatures in Arkansas and Texas, triple digit weather? I havenít heard of disastrous effects on poultry production in that area, but certainly without adequate house and bird management preparation, mortality, morbidity, reduced gain and inefficiency of performance would have occurred In areas in the South, the producers expect the weather to turn warm to hot and make plans to ameliorate the effects.

If they donít prepare, they suffer the consequences. As the old saying goes ìIf you fail to plan, you plan to failî. The time to prepare for avoiding the effects of high ambient temperature is now. The two strategies that are used to diminish the effects of high temperature on poultry are maintenance of ventilation equipment and reviewing what to do in when high temperatures endanger your poultry flock.

Many times we get distracted and forget to prepare for the advent of summer weather. It is usually the early heat spell that causes the greatest damage and loss of birds due to heat stress than when birds have been gradually acclimated to higher temperatures in the middle of the summer

Therefore, take the covers off your tunnel fans, get your migration fences out, reset the phases on your computer controls or think about what has to be done as far as ventilation and fogging and at what temperatures. If you canít remember, find someone who does know before you are in the middle of a crisis Also, remind your employees what needs to be done in high heat and humidity situations

The first equipment that comes to mind in making sure you are prepared for summer weather is your fans Fans are rated for a particular efficiency to work within your house, but if they have dirty blades, if the wire mesh is coated with dust, if the shutters are stuck and dirty, and if the fan belt is loose, then you are loosing precious air velocity, and volume that should be used to ventilate your birds

The next machinery that needs attention is the fogging system Have you taken the nozzles out and soaked them in vinegar or some solution to get them clean and clear from particles that might inhibit their ability to deliver the right volume of water and in the right droplet size to maximize evaporative cooling? If not, now is the time. The pump also needs to be checked and water line rinsed and sanitized.

Other strategies to remember during high heat situations are to remove the feed from the bird in the heat of the day. The reason is that the consumption of feed produces heat during digestion and adds to the heat stress of the birds. One effective way to get this done is to raise the feed line while there is still feed in it early in the morning.

Raising the feed line gives the birds added floor space and allows all birds to eat all the way down the feeder line when the feed is returned to the birds Otherwise, the birds cause stress and carcass damage as they crowd the feeders when the auger fills the feed pans On the other hand, water helps to cool birds. We have found that the water in the water lines rapidly reach ambient temperatures. That means, when the temperature reaches 95 degrees in the house, the temperature of the water in the line is 95 degrees and inhibits some consumption by the birds Where are the water lines usually placed in poultry houses? Near the ceiling, one of the hotter places in the house Flushing of hot water lines is thought of as a good strategy.

However, when the temperature reaches 95 degrees or higher, birds donit drink much no matter what the temperature of the water Therefore, refreshing water lines is of more value toward the end of the day when the birds go back on feed Because of the feed and water refusal by birds during very high temperatures, the other strategies of increasing airflow over the birds, evaporative cooling and feed removal during the heat of the day become very important management techniques

The story is told of the employee who listed in his job application that his greatest asset was his ability to sleep when the wind blows. When the strong winds came, the employer went to check out his farm and found all in order because his employee had been prepared and was fast asleep in the barn. May, you be able to sleep when the temperature gets hot because your houses are properly prepared and your equipment is properly maintained.

'Toy Farming' Is Next Best Thing

RANDY WELLS
Indiana Co. Correspondent

INDIANA (Indiana Co.) — Ever since Fred Foster was a teenager and worked on Indiana County potato and cabbage farms in the 1950s, he has wanted to own and live on a farm. But he realized it's a tough business.

"It's probably best that I just have a 150-acre farm in my basement," he said.

Not only can Foster farm in the cool, well-lighted comfort of the lower level of his home, he can also enjoy the nearly 400 farm implements — including 258 tractors — he keeps down there.

It all started about Christmas 1986. On a visit to a local farm implement dealership, Foster decided to buy a one-sixteenth scale Ertl model of an Allis-Chalmers tractor like the one he had driven on the farm where he worked as a boy.

On the back of the tractor's box was an invitation to join the Ertl Farm Toy Club.

"I was a little uncomfortable listing my age," he said. "But this is where my interest started."

Today a large part of the basement of Foster's White Township, Indiana County home is occupied by a 17-foot by 13-foot scale farm layout, complete with farm implements, buildings, livestock, and farmers. And in lighted, glass-door display cases along the wall are dozens of the tractors and pieces of farm equipments Foster has added to his collection since that first Allis Chalmers.

These are not just toy tractors. Many are Precision Series models — nearly exact replica made of steel, with rubber tires, gearshifts that move and seats that have springs. When you turn the steering wheel, the front wheels turn on many models.

Many of the tractors in Foster's basement are from manufacturers' collector series — one tractor was offered each year for several years.

From behind a glass door Foster retrieves an Ertl model commemorating the five millionth 1066 tractor built by International. Foster said he paid $45 for it five years ago. He estimates it's worth about $250.

Models of a John Deeer 620 tractor and hay baler — circa 1954 — were bought for $20. The tractor alone today is worth $100, Foster said.

So the models are good investments?

"Yes, but it's like the stock market. You have to watch it a little bit," he said.

But it's evident Foster isn't in it for the money. It's for the fascination with tractors and farm life. The men he worked for as a teenager were "the first to give me the value of farming," he said.

Not all of his collection came straight from manufacturers. He lifts an old John Deere from the shelf and recounts how he found it at a yard sale. The tractor obviously was a child's toy. The green paint has been worn away along some of the edges and the steering wheel is missing.

That's not a problem, Foster said. When he gets time he'll repaint the tractor, and replacement steering wheels and other parts can be ordered from manufacturers to replace ones that are damaged or missing.

One of the oldest pieces in his collection is a cast-aluminim steam thrasher from about 1956. He also has several pieces of Tru-Scale implements and an old tractor made at Hubley. Both Tru-Scale and Hubley have been out of business for decades, he said.

But it's rare to find valuable collectible farm toys at yard or garage sales.

"This has become a smart industry," he said. " People know what the values are."

The best places to find farm toys already in circulation are organized toy shows, like the big one coming up in mid-July in Beaver Falls, Beaver County, he said.

Other collectors gather at the shows to sell and swap toys and parts and to admire each other's collections.

About eight years ago Foster came to a conclusion: "Now that I'm collecting, I should display them in some way," he said.

That's when he hit upon the idea for his "150-acre farm" in his basement.

On specially-designed tables with plastic foam tops, Foster designed and built a diorama depicting a farm scene from the 1940s and '50 — the era when he fell in love with farming.

The centerpiece of Foster's display is a scratch-built barn. Constructed to one-sixteen the scale to complement his tractors and implements, the barn is 36 inches long, 23 inches wide, and 26 inches high at the peak of the roof.

Foster spent months building it. He hand-cut the rafters and siding boards and — just like the real barns built years ago — he pinned the rafters and braces together with small wooden dowels.

No, that's not a giant making its way through an Indiana farm. That's Fred Foster on his huge miniature farm, making some minor adjustments.

A section of the roof and floor are removable so that the working stanchions and bull pen in the lowest level are visible.

He even handmade the tiny hinges for the main double doors, fashioning them out of copper tubing he cut and hammered into shape.

One side of the barn roof is covered with miniature shingles Foster bought at a hobby store. But the hobby shop went out of business before he had all the shingles he needed. His solution: He built a small wooden extension ladder and positioned one of his farmers at the top of the ladder, depicting him installing the first row of shingles in a re-roofing project.

Other hand-built structures in the display are an L-shaped house with windows that slide up and down, a milk house with cooler and old milk cans, a corn crib with screened sides, a combination outhouse and coal house, and a covered bridge crossing a small stream.

And everywhere around the display are Foster's busy farmers and their tractors — pulling hay wagons, plowing and disc harrowing fields, and spraying cabbage.

There are also lots of animals — cows, horses, sheep, chickens, barnyard cats and dogs, even deer and an owl in a tree.

Foster used a table saw in his basement workshop to rip soft pine boards into the sizes he needed. But much of the diorama is made from other materials at hand. Torn up furnace filters give the illusion of water in the stream. And carpet underlayment cut in strips and laid side-by-side looks like furrows behind a Farmall M and three-bottom Little Genius plow.

Foster was unable to find a replica of the Iron Age sprayer he had used as a teen, so he built his own. Scaled down from a parts list of an actual 10-row sprayer, Foster cut tin, aluminum, and rubber hoses and soldered connections to build his own sprayer. The boom, made of brass tubing, swings in and out, up and down.

An Oliver Super 88 pulls the sprayer across a field of make-believe cabbage plants in his display.

It takes a considerable amount of time and work, but Foster can disassemble his diorama, pack it into a trailer, and take it on the road to toy shows. At a toy show in Summerville, Jefferson County, his farm display won awards three years in a row.

It was also featured in a 1997 issue of Toy Farmer magazine.

Foster is the senior buyer at FMC Corporation, a materials-handling firm near Homer City, Indiana County. When he retires in 16 months, he'll have more time to tinker on his farm. He wants to paint a Mail Pouch tobacco sign on the end of the barn and install lights in the barn and house.

He also plans to add a horse barn, a gristmill along the stream, and a main road near the back of the barn. Foster hasn't been able to find a toy manufacturer that is building replicas of some of the potato and cabbage harvesting equipment he used as a boy, so he plans to make those, too.

Out of all the toy tractors in his basement, Foster can still pick his favorite — a Farmall Super M.

"I like the red ones," he explained.

Foster cares for a large tractor collection at his home.

Herbert Hoover Farney says, "I didn't think they could mix it."

Steve, Dale, and Herbert Hoover Farney
Silvery Falls Farms - Lowville NY

Mr Farney is talking about mixing 11.5% long stem dry hay by ration weight in the Knight Reel Auggie 3450, which he and his sons decided to purchase in September of 1994

Herbert was born the day Herbert Hoover was elected president

The Farneys previously owned a three-auger Oswalt stationary unit They state that the "old mixer tended to ball material up, especially in wetter forages, while the Reel Auggie 3450 'fluffs' the ration "

The Farney's herd average is up about 1,000 lbs , and they have a higher protein test as well They milk 160 Holsteins, and feed a total of 260 head They like the low power requirement — the 390 cubic foot machine is powered by a John Deere 2030 tractor

3000 Reel Auggie TMR Mixers
Now available in seven sizes with capacities from 147 to 600 cubic feet

We deliver peace of mind with every GENESIS™ tractor

NEW HOLLAND

Buying or leasing a GENESIS™ tractor from New Holland is virtually risk-free.

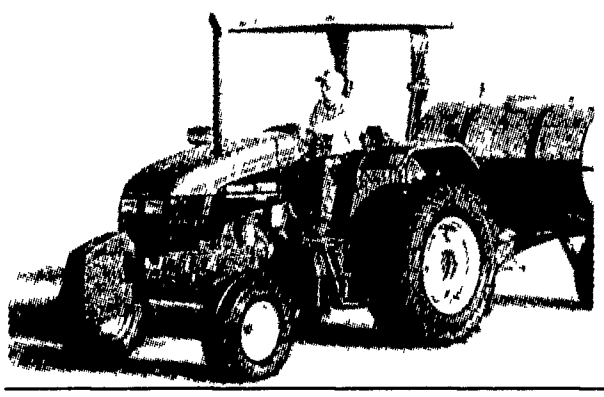
- GUARANTEED trade-in value with no-risk leases
- The best warranty – 3 years, 3,000 hours, no deductible
- The best performance – the best lugging ability, the best fuel economy, the smoothest powershift and more!
- The best dealer service and support

Stop in for a test drive. We deliver peace of mind with every GENESIS™ tractor.

Excellent in the field - and on the farm

New Holland 70- to 90-PTO-hp tractors feature a 16x16 Pulse Command™ transmission with push-button power shifting within each of four speed groups Speeds are evenly spaced 18% apart, with nine speeds in the usual two- to seven-mph working range. Plenty of gear overlap makes range shifting unnecessary most of the time.
The shuttle lets you pull out from a dead stop or change direction without clutching An optional, electro-hydraulically engaged creeper is also available.

NEW HOLLAND



Shuttle back and forth with ease

The left-hand, column-mounted shuttle control on New Holland 40 to 62 PTO hp tractors with 8x8 and 16x8 transmissions provides convenient shifting of the best, fully-synchronized shuttle in this horsepower class. Shuttling is controlled with the left hand, leaving your right hand free to operate the loader

Great looks. Aggressive power.

New Holland 35 Series tractors really "work big" in the field or on the job.

- Engines have good lugging ability with 1000 useful rpm's between maximum torque and maximum power
- 14.5 gpm hydraulic flow assures fast implement response
- 3-point lift system, activated by touch control, is best-in class
- Electro-hydraulic differential lock provides maximum traction when needed.

Dekalb Opens Discovery Research Center For Swine

DEKALB, Ill. — Dekalb Swine Breeders, Inc., has officially opened its new Discovery Research Center, which includes one of the only commercial biotechnology laboratories in the world specific to swine.

"Back in 1990, Dekalb became the first swine breeding company to make a major investment in biotechnology," said Dr. Brad Didion, who manages the company's swine biotechnology program.

"The opening of this state-of-the-art research laboratory is yet another example of Dekalb's ongoing commitment to both R&D and the pork industry."

Located next to the company's headquarters, the Discovery Research Center actually houses two separate laboratories — one for genomics (DNA marker-assisted selection, PCR-based diagnostics) the other for reproductive biology (in vitro fertilization, embryo-transfer technology).

"In the years ahead, most of the major breakthroughs in swine genetics will come from biotechnology," Didion said. "Besides facilitating the development of new ideas and technologies, Dekalb's Discovery Research Center will in some cases allow us to get the work done more efficiently and cost-effectively, which also benefits our end customers."

According to Dr. David Fox, vice president of R&D for Dekalb Swine Breeders, the Discovery Research Center will also allow the company to work with more proprietary information.

"I think the new research facility will help us sharpen our focus, accelerate the development of certain projects, and make us an even more innovative supplier of swine genetics well into the next century," Fox said.

He adds that work at the Discovery Research Center will be supplemented by the company's ongoing collaborative research programs with 14 universities, the National Pork Producers Council and other allied industry.

Simplicity Offers New Diesel Garden Tractor

PORT WASHINGTON, Wis. — Simplicity Manufacturing, Inc. has added a 24.5-horsepower diesel model to its line of Legacy garden tractors.

"This additional engine offering allows us to meet a growing demand for diesel powered lawn and garden products here in North America as well as overseas," said Warner C. Frazier, Simplicity CEO.

The company anticipates the unit will appeal to their rural customers, hobby farmers, small commercial cutting businesses, or large property owners who put garden tractors through an array of punishing tasks.

Simplicity chose the Briggs & Stratton DM950D Series engine for its reliable performance. The 24.5-hp engine features three-cylinder liquid cooled design with fuel injection.

"We've tested the unit in a variety of conditions and have been pleased with the performance," said Frazier The company said their network of dealers and distributors, particularly those located in Europe, were eagerly awaiting the diesel-powered addition.

The Legacy series set new standards in garden tractor design when it was introduced just a few months ago. Dan Weingartz has already retailed some gas-powered units through his dealership, Weingartz Supply Company, Utica, Mich. "Our customers are glad that there finally is a big, beefy, garden tractor available with the superior Simplicity cut," he said In addition to the new diesel model, the line includes three gasoline powered models, including one liquid-cooled version.

The tractor's platform is a solid "C" channel frame and heavy-duty cast-iron front axle, giving the tractor strength to handle heavy front implements and durability for years of use.

The Simplicity free floating™ shaft driven mowing deck, available in 48-inch and 60-inch width, uniquely mounts to a pivoting front axle and has full-width rear rollers. The result is a deck that responds to changing terrain and provides the most even cut available. Cutting height is electrically adjustable from 1-inch to 5-inches, with a switch on the automotive style dash.

From the comfortable, high-back seat, operators can engage attachments and view the integrated instrument panel which includes tachometer, fuel gauge, voltmeter or temperature gauge, hourmeter, and indicator lights. Implements lift and lower hydraulically with a convenient left foot-control, leaving both hands on the steering wheel for maximum control.

The Legacy garden tractors have a shaft-driven transmission. A hi/lo range transaxle allows the operator to choose the range best suited for the job simply by shifting a lever. A Twin-Shift™ Drive Control provides foot-controlled acceleration (like a car) or optional hand-controlled forward operation. For large mowing areas, the hand control also serves as a cruise control And for comfort, all models offer power steering and a tilt steering wheel.

The patented Automatic Controlled Traction™ system, which automatically distributes power to both rear wheels, provides exceptional traction on hills or in ditches. There is also a differential lock for maximum traction in the tough spots.

The Legacy garden tractor can be fitted with 26 optional attachments to meet a wide variety of needs. Attachments include front-end loader, dozer blade, collection systems, tiller, dump carts, broom, snowthrowers, snow crabs, rear PTO, 3-point hitch, a roll-over protection structure (ROPS), Agtread tires, plow, and more.

Case Corporation Introduces Automated AFS Soil Samplers

RACINE, Wis. — Case Corporation has announced further expansion of its precision farming equipment offerings with Case IH Advanced Farming Systems (AFS) soil samplers.

Case engineers have combined the most automated soil samplers on the market with AFS Global Positioning System technology to create a convenient and economical system that answers the increased demand for precise soil sampling.

"The AFS soil sampler is a powerful piece of the AFS package when used with a GPS receiver and the Agri-Logic Pocket Survey program," said Paul Hamm, AFS marketing specialist. "Now anyone can grid a field and perform site-specific soil sampling."

Designed for use with the Case IH AFS global positioning system and Agri-Logic software, the soil sampler allows the user to obtain accurate soil information that corresponds to facts found in AFS yield and moisture data. By combining all of this information, growers are able to investigate the relationships between yield and soil type, fertility, soil nutrient levels, drainage, compaction, tillage, and more.

The soil samplers are available in two models. A pickup truck mounted model, the 2400, is designed to fold down when not in use for easy storage and transport. The height is adjustable so that it can be used with any pickup. The model 2403 uses as heavy-duty A-frame to mount to any three-point tractor hitch. It requires a minimum tractor hydraulic pressure of 2,200 psi for operation.

Both models can take a 24-inch sample in only 12 seconds. Using 8,000 pounds of downward force and high-quality stainless steel C-probes ensures that a complete sample will be taken even in extremely firm soil conditions. Model 2400 utilizes a 12-volt electric motor over a hydraulic power unit. The tractor hydraulic system provides the power for the model 2403.

Case IH AFS soil samplers save time and money. Neither the truck- not tractor-mounted models require a dedicated vehicle. The tractor mounted model 2403 uses the tractor's hydraulic system to take up to 24-inch samples in only 12 seconds using up to 8,000 pounds of force.

Neither requires a dedicated vehicle, increasing the sampler's economy further. The pickup truck model mounts in minutes using expanding rubber stake pocket mounts. The tractor version can also be mounted and detached easily.

At the sampling site, the operator controls the sampler using a hand held remote control switch in the cab of the truck or tractor. After the probe reaches the desired depth, the switch is reversed, pulling the probe and sample out of the ground. A curved spring-loaded scraper peels the soil core out of the probe. This sample is then stored with up to 29 other cores in a stainless steel collection bucket.

"This is the most automated, labor-saving sampler on the market. Samples can be taken quickly and economically," said Hamm.

Case IH soil samplers are of value to many users. Crop consultants, as well as farmers, fertilizer dealers, soil testing laboratories and chemical companies, will find models 2400 and 2403 perfect for both small and large soil sampling projects.

When used in conjunction with an AFS Beacon Receiver or Universal Receiver and Agri-Logic Pocket Survey software, the soil samplers help provide detailed precision farming information keyed to specific points within each field. This information can be integrated with other data obtained using a yield monitor system, variable rate application system or any other site-specific farming technology through the use of Agri-Logic programs such as Instant Yield Map, Instant Survey, and Instant Crops.

Versatile Utility Vehicle Easy To Handle

LEBANON, Ind. — Z-Cart, from Lt. Rich Products located here, offers users a more versatile and maneuverable utility vehicle.

Z-Cart hauls 800 pounds, tows 1,200 pounds, has a maximum ground speed of 15 miles per hour, seats two, is easy to control, and can use a wide variety of attachments.

A hydrostatic transmission achieves all the parameters and can compete with conventional belt drive/torque converter type vehicles.

Z-Cart uses a large pump/wheel motor transmission consisting of Hydro-Gear BDP21L pumps and Eaton/Char-Lynn wheel motors. Power comes from a 17 horsepower Kawaski v-twin or 18 hp Briggs Vanguard v-twin. Control dampers make the unit easy to handle.

Large 25-inch ATV style tires provide plenty of traction. The low center of gravity makes the Z-Cart extremely stable.

Available options and attachments include 1,000 pounds electric bed lift, bed liners, ROPS system, 60-inch snow plot, front-mount electric fertilizer spreader, 50-gallon spray system with 10 front mount boom, and dual rear caster wheels for heavier applications. An out-front mower deck option will be offered later on in 60-inch or 72-inch deck widths.

Z-Cart hauls 800 pounds, tows 1,200 pounds, has a maximum ground speed of 15 miles per hour, seats two, is easy to control, and can use a wide variety of attachments.

Farm Bureau Launches Labor Campaign

GLENMONT, N.Y. — New York Farm Bureau recently launched an ambitious labor campaign that the statewide farm advocacy organization calls "Workers to Harvest." The campaign is designed to address the immediate labor shortage and other agricultural labor related issues.

Already this year, the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) has begun to audit western New York farms, removing illegal workers. Both INS and the General Accounting Office agree that 50 percent or more of New York's migrant workforce are working illegally.

Grower concern and the significant farm labor shortage are highlighted by the increased use of the H-2A program in New York. This program is both expensive and difficult for the average farmer. Farm Bureau fears the H-2A program will be unable to address the increasing need for agricultural labor as a result of the growing number of applications. This year, there are four times as many farmer applications currently awaiting certification than last year.

New York Farm Bureau's objective is to build a public and legislative awareness of the difficulty agricultural employers face in securing a legal workforce. The "Workers to Harvest" campaign will also focus on how this problem affects New Yorkers' ability to consume the safe, affordable products grown here in New York. New York Farm Bureau hopes to achieve awareness by generating and utilizing support from members and friends on the local, state and national levels. New York Farm Bureau will also monitor INS enforcement, document the statewide labor situation, and provide the media with first-hand labor crises.

For more information on the "Workers to Harvest" campaign contact New York Farm Bureau at (518) 436-8495.

Ewes Probably Need Full Treatment Of MGA

COLUMBIA, Mo. — To get ewes to breed out of season, sheep producers would probably have to feed MGTA for seven days straight.

A shorter time may not do the job, according to researchers at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

MGA is melangestrol acetate, which acts like progesterone, the pregnancy hormone, MU doctoral student Jay Daniel said in a report to the Midwest Section of the American Society of Animal Sciences.

Breeding out of season can help get three lamb crops every two years instead of just one a year. Producers should first consult with a veterinarian about the use of MGA, Daniel said. Then they should plan to feed it to ewes for seven days straight.

"We tried feeding it just one day. It didn't work," said Daniel, who conducted the research with Duane Keisler, MU animal scientist. "Then we tried injecting progesterone. That worked a little, but nowhere near as well as feeding MGA for seven days."

Santa Gertrudis Cattle Provide Heart-Healthy Meat

JINNY WILT
Adams County
Correspondent

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co) — As you turn into the lane at Chapel-Ridge Farms, the pastoral scene that greets you seems to indicate this is going to be a pleasant experience

First to announce your presence is Annie, an Australian Queensland Cattle Dog — a dog with a tale — no pun intended.

Known as a Blue Heelers for the blue cast of her coat, Annie is half Australian Dingo, a quarter Dalmation, and a quarter Shepherd, according to Linda Moose, who with husband Gene Moose owns the three Chapel-Ridge farms — and Annie.

Linda can't say enough good things about Annie, who by now is bouncing around the family room, toy in mouth

While Santa Gertrudis cattle are Chapel-Ridge's main moneymaker, Linda said of Annie, "She saved my daughter and I a couple of times We had a big bull that we brought up from Alabama and he was a little on the sassy side I went out in the field to take some pictures with my daughter Sue and we were trying to move around so we could get the sun in the right position and did not realize we were getting between this bull and a cow in heat and he took off after us

"We were in a swampy area and you know how it is in your nightmares, you keep running and can't get anywhere. Well, that's how it was. Annie was only about 2 at the time and she just grabbed that bull by the nose and held on until he was so glad to get away from her," she said.

Linda recounts stories of how Annie, who is now 7, has saved the day on the farm "I don't know what we'll ever do when she's gone, because she really does take the place of a man," Linda said

Her help is noticed daily when Gene feeds the cattle because Annie will guard the gates and he doesn't have to get on and off the tractor She's so intelligent that in some cases the couple spell words so that she doesn't know what they are saying Linda notes that the word cookie is one of those words

"But the job she likes best is putting cattle through gates," Linda said, with a laugh.

Not only is the dog special on this farm, so are the cattle Travelers along Rt 15 in southern Adams County, which runs through the one farm, might think they're in Texas as they glance into the Chapel-Ridge fields

The red-colored Santa Gertrudis cattle grazing in the fields are members of the first American breed of cattle ever developed, according to Linda

The couple explains that they were developed "to take grass and turn it into meat with the least amount of interference "

The breed was developed on the King Ranch in Texas and named for a river that runs through it.

According to Linda, "After the Civil War, Capt. King settled along the Santa Gertrudis River where there was a Spanish mission called Santa Gertrudis. They called the cattle Santa Gertrudis because it was the namesake of the King Ranch."

Gene explains that the couple started to raise the breed of cattle after they had calving problems while they were operating — and eventually owned — his mother-in-law Catherine Gerrald's farm in the mid-to-late-1970s. "We found out real quick we weren't going to be in the beef business very long" because of the calving problems, Gene said.

"Our daughter Susan White got us started in Santa Gertrudis My dad was a crippled man and had replaced his dairy herd with mixed breeds of beef cattle. We had a Charlois bull and were having very serious calving problems Sue went to South Mountain Fair and came home and said 'You should go see the breed of cattle they have, I've never seen anything like it '

'We did our research and found a characteristic of the breed was easy calving. With Gene the only one here, we needed cattle that did not need constant hands-on attention, so we got our first bull in 1977 and that ended our calving problems," Linda explained

Over the years the couple continued to add more and more Santa Gertrudis cattle. Today they have a closed herd of 180 head on their 400 acres of land. "We're self-sustaining now," Linda said.

The two are quite happy with that because it allows them to stay away from vaccinations, steroids, and antibiotics. "There's nothing coming in and it allows us to stay clean and all natural," Gene said.

Linda, who is president of the five-state Northeast Santa Gertrudis Association, said that not only is calving easy for the breed, it is hardy because it was bred to withstand the harsh Texas weather, and naturally lean.

"The more you feed them the more red meat they build," she said.

And the composition of the read meat is surprising. It is so lean that it has been endorsed by the Adams County Hear Association, Gene said.

Linda explained: "We had the meat tested at a Lancaster laboratory and it was found to be lower in calories, cholesterol, and fat than skinless chicken breast We have an extremely healthy red meat product "

Laboratory results showed that the canned beef chunks from cattle on the farm has 1 gram of saturated fat and two grams of total fat and 30 milligrams of cholesterol. Sodium is low, also at 60 milligrams.

A leading brand of canned white chicken in water compares at one gram of saturated fat and two grams of total fat, 35 milligrams of cholesterol, and 220 milligrams of sodium

It is because of these statistics that the couple and their daughter Sue White and her husband Doug White, who are partners in the Chapel Ridge Meat and Mercantile, Inc. on Chapel Ridge Road, find many of their clients are people with health problems and in need of the red meat protein.

"Many people will come in and say they were not able to tolerate beef and now they can. It's because it doesn't have all the additives and is lean," Linda said

Gene said, "Any animal that is used has been on grain and hay for at least 60 days." Organic certification is pending from the Pennsylvania Certified Organic.

Linda and Gene Moose, owners of Chapel-Ridge Farms, look over three of the five bulls they have on their three farms where Santa Gertrudis beef cattle are raised. The coupled uses no steroids or antibiotics in producing cattle for the market and are awaiting an organic designation for their meat. The beef is so lean it compares to tuna fish and chicken and has received endorsement from the Adams County Heart Association.

The store is off the beaten track, Linda said. "You must come looking for us. We are open Friday from 3 - 8 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m." They also have a stand at the Gettysburg Farmer's Market open until noon on Saturdays.

Spangler's Restaurant located at the Hunterstown Exit of Rt. 15 and Casa Reyna of Gettysburg are using beef from Chapel-Ridge. Both businesses continue to increase their orders for more meat because it is so well received by the public, Gene said.

The couple also owns and operates Adams Abstract Associates, a title insurance company in Gettysburg. Linda and Sue add working in the office to their list of things to do.

The couple carries their love of preservation into their own home.

Linda said the farm they live on at 680 Barlow-Greenmount

Annie, an Australian Queensland Cattle Dog, or Blue Heeler in an important part of the operation at Chapel-Ridge Farms near Gettysburg. Linda and Gene Moose, owners of the farms, tell stories of how the well-mannered dog has been important to their operation. The dog's instinctive herding skills take the place of one man, Linda said. The breed is one-half Australian Dingo, one-quarter Dalmatian, and one-quarter shepherd.

A first-time mother, a 2-year-old Santa Gertrudis cow at Chapel-Ridge Farms near Gettysburg provides lunch for her calf while she babysits another youngster. Gene and Linda Moose, owners of the three farms where the beef cattle are raised, say the cows will often babysit for each other.

Road, which adjoins the farm she grew up on and the first one they bought, had been sitting vacant for 30 years.

"When we bought it in 1986 it had no plumbing or electricity. We think the one part was built about 1840 and the big house and barn were finished in 1880," she said.

Gene, a former builder, restored the house to its current 4,000 square foot status working in the evening after he was finished with the farm work. And that includes all three floors of the house plus an addition that connects the old homestead and the big house.

Linda said with a chuckle that it took so long "I thought we were never going to live long enough to get moved into it."

The barns were falling down and the fields were "so grown up with honeysuckle and multiflora rose that when my husband mowed, all you could see was his hat going down through the field. There was not a fence on the farm. We spent the next three years building fence, trying to get the pasture established, and rebuilding the barns," she said.

In 1992 they bought their third farm on Cunningham Road, about one mile from the first two, and this one was in disrepair. They have since restored a very old home on the property that was probably used as some sort of facility during the Civil War and continue working to get the fields into shape.

"We feel strongly about preserving old historical houses and it breaks my heart to see a barn burn because you know you're never going to replace it. We feel strongly about the land, too. We believe in organic farming and believe the land is good to us and we should be good back to it.

"Our farm has a lot of weeds that probably shouldn't be there, but we're getting it down naturally and don't believe in spraying or using herbicides or pesticides. It shows, but it's a healthy place to live," Linda said.
